REVERE DEATH MYSTERY

HUERTA READY TO BAR LIND

Serves Notice on Washington That Envoy Must Make Satisfactory Explanation.

SITUATION GROWS TENSE

TODAY'S MEXICO DEVELOPMENTS

President Huerta announced today that John Lind, President Wilson's special envoy to Mexico, will be "persona non grata" unless he recognizes the Huerta government.

Secretary Bryan warns Huerta to "go slow" until he receives President Wilson's message from Lind. The President will tolerate no humiliation of the latter, State Department officials say.

Senator Clark of Wyoming, in a vigorous speech today, demanded positive action by this country in the Mexican situation.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 7.—Provisional President Huerta of Mexico today boldly threw down the gauntlet to the United States in his move to secure recognition of his government by the American government at Washington.

By Huerta's direction Foreign Minister Manuel Aldape informed the United States embassy that John Lind, who is being sent here as the personal envoy of President Wilson, will be expelled from the country as an undesirable alien unless Lind goes before the Mexican government and explains his official character and intentions, or else brings official recognition of the Huerta administration from the Wilson administration in Washington.

This is the boldest and most belligerent course yet taken by Huerta and Caminetti appeared at the court room early and went into consultation with Diggs and the attorneys for the defense. One juror who was discharged after the twelve had been accepted yesterday, was to be replaced at the opening of today's session.

The dislike Diggs has shown for being snapped by photographers nearly caused him serious injury. He dodged three camera men and leaped upon a rapidly moving street car. "All reports that my jewelry has been found or the whereabouts known are utterly unfounded," declared Mrs. John E. Hanan, in denial of the statement that the stolen gems, worth $150,000, had been located in Boston, where they were "pledged" for the sum of $65,000.

BODY OF WOMAN IS THROWN UP BY SEA; CLOTHING MISSING

The body of a comely woman, partly dressed, was found on Point of Pines beach, Revere, early today. There is much mystery as to the exact manner of her death.

Later the body was found to be that of Mrs. Ruth Woodworth Smiley, wife of Allan T. Smiley of No. 24 Bowers avenue, Malden.

MISSING FROM HOME SINCE YESTERDAY.

Mr. Smiley is a townsman on the Elevated road.

Mrs. Smiley had been missing from her home since 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Mr. Smiley, who had reported the absence of his wife to the Malden police, was notified at 9:30 o'clock of the discovery of the body at Point of Pines. He started for the beach immediately.

There was much speculation concerning just how Mrs. Smiley came to her death.

Mr. Smiley said, when he reported her disappearance, that she had been suffering from a nervous breakdown.

But, when her body was found, the hat, shoes and skirt were missing. The absence of these garments gave rise to speculation whether Mrs. Smiley had actually drowned herself.

American Establishes Identity.

The first connection between the body at Point of Pines beach and Mrs. Smiley was made by an AMERICAN reporter in Malden.

The underclothing on the body was marked, "Ruth M. Woodward," or "Ruth M. Woodworth," the police were not sure which. When the Malden reporter heard that a woman's body, with this name marked on the clothing had been found at the beach, he went to the home of Allan T. Smiley, who had reported his wife's disappearance only a short time before.

"What was Mrs. Smiley's maiden name?" he asked.

"Ruth M. Woodworth," Mr. Smiley replied. That practically established the identity. The wedding ring found on the body was engraved: "A. T. S. to R. M. W. 7. 3. 1911."

These are the initials of Mr. and Mrs. Smiley, who were married at Portland, Me., July 3, two years ago.

Mrs. Smiley was forty years old and a native of Nashwaak, N. B. She has one sister, Mrs. C. A. Morgan of Portland and two brothers, Fred and Portlow Woodworth of Nashwaak, N. B.

Mr. Smiley has a daughter by a former marriage, Dorothy Smiley, fifteen years old.

Soon after Mr. Smiley and Miss Woodworth were married in Portland, they came to Malden and set up housekeeping.

MRS. J. ASTOR OPENS CAMPAIGN AGAINST WIDOW

NEWPORT, Aug. 7.—Mrs. John Astor made her first appearance as a hostess today in connection with the Astor Cup races at Newport. She entertained aboard the steam yacht Nonsa a party which included Mr. and Mrs. William Payne Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Iselin, and Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Iselin.

Mrs. Astor has not been in society since her divorce from her late husband. She returned from Europe a few days ago to take her place as THE Mrs. Astor, mother of Vincent Astor. She came to Newport, and this was her first appearance.

Mrs. Madeline Force Astor, the eldest, is spending the Summer quietly at Bar Harbor. She has shown signs of contesting Mrs. Astor's claim.

Mrs. Astor today greeted her guests at the head of the gangway, leading to the Nonsa. She wore an English tailored suit of blue serge—a huge sailor hat with red ribbon trimmings and a white ruche about her neck.

Every yacht at Newport went out today to see the Astor races. J. P. Morgan's "Corsair," Arthur Curtiss James' "Aloha," and the "Apache" took the Russian Ambassador and Mrs. Bakheleff, Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, Miss Jeanette Fish, Mrs. Leonard Thomas, Louis Cass Ledyard, Louis Brugniere, Mrs. Richard Gambrill, Miss Edith Whitmore, Miss Anna Sands, Charles E. Sands, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Peters, Mr. and Mrs. Julian Little, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert M. Harrison, and Mr. and Mrs. H. A. C. Taylor.

The Astor Cup race is over the Brenton Reef course. Tomorrow comes the race for the King's Cup, donated by the King of England. The race lasted all day.

BOSTON MAN HURT BY FALL AT ALBANY.

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 7.—Christopher York, 23, of No. 3 Wadhams street, Boston, an employe of a company which is cleaning the exterior of the capitol, fell from a scaffold rigged at the second floor of the State building today and was seriously hurt.

CLOTHING OF REVERE BEACH VICTIM PUZZLES

at No. 53 Bond street. A month ago they moved to No. 24 Bowers street.

Yesterday afternoon her sister, Mrs. Morgan, arrived from Portland to visit. Soon after Mrs. Morgan came Mrs. Smiley said she was going upstairs to take a nap. Mrs. Morgan said she would go out for a little stroll. Mrs. Morgan returned in ten minutes, at 3 o'clock, but could not find Mrs. Smiley anywhere in the house. She thought this singular and as the afternoon wore on became worried.

When Mr. Smiley returned home and found that his wife had left the house so abruptly, he shared his sister-in-law's alarm. Inquiries were made for Mrs. Smiley in the evening. Forestdale cemetery in Malden was searched. Men helped Mr. Smiley to drag a small pond in the cemetery. When morning came and she was not home, Mr. Smiley felt compelled to ask police assistance in tracing his wife.

But it was only a little while before this that the body of the missing woman was found, cast up on the sands at Point of Pines beach.

The body was found by Peter Demasa of No. 12 Bates road, Revere, a laborer employed in Lynn. He walks up the beach to his work every morning.

Just as Demasa was striding along the shore road he spied what he thought was a white bundle on the beach, about fifty feet south of North Circle. On finding it to be the body of a woman he telephoned the Revere police. Dr. E. J. Monahan of Beach street, Revere, was notified.

The police and others were immediately struck by the singular absence of much of the woman's clothing. The body was clad in a white shirtwaist, black stockings, corsets and other underclothing. The name "Ruth M. Woodworth" was worked in light-colored thread on the stockings, and laundry tags were marked the same, though the police at first read the name as "Woodward."

The hat, skirt and shoes were missing. In the description of clothing which Mr. Smiley gave the Malden police, when he reported his wife as missing, he made no mention of a hat. But he said she had on a long linen coat, green skirt and black shoes, in addition to other garments.

So the linen coat, shoes and green skirt have yet to be accounted for.

Next to the wedding ring finger was Mrs. Smiley's engagement ring, a diamond solitaire.

The body was well up on the sand, just about where it would have been left by the tide, which was high at 2:30 a. m. Thehead was toward Revere. It was at 4:30 that Demase discovered the body, or two hours after high tide. It lay there until 9:45, under police guard, awaiting the necessary examination by a medical examiner.

Dr. Monahan of Revere, who made the preliminary examination, said that rigor mortis had not set in, so the woman had been dead only a few hours at the most. Though the body contained some water it was not considered certain that death was due to drowning.

Medical Examiner Magrath made a cursory examination on the beach, then ordered the body taken to Revere police station. Later it was taken to North Grove street morgue. Dr. Magrath did not give out any official statement at the beach.

The news in Malden that Mrs. Smiley had been found dead at Point of Pines caused a severe shock in the Bowers avenue neighborhood.

That Mrs. Smiley would make way with herself was regarded as unlikely on account of her deep religious nature. She was a member of the Pine Street Methodist Episcopal Church of Portland and, since living in Malden, had attended the Centre M. E. Church of that city. Self-destruction would be abhorrent to all her religious ideals and impulses.

ELEMENTS OF MYSTERY IN POINT OF PINES TRAGEDY

How did Mrs. Smiley go from her home in Malden to the beach?

Was death due to drowning? If so, was Mrs. Smiley a suicide?

What became of her linen coat, shoes and green skirt?

Where was Mrs. Smiley between 3 p. m. yesterday, when she left her home in Malden, and the time she died?

CARRYING body of Mrs. Allan T. Smiley of Malde, cast up by sea at Point of Pines today, to ambulanie for transferral to Revere police statio There are several mysterious features in connection with the woman's death:

Medill M'Cormick Ejected in Pajamas

Thrown from Pullman at Syracuse, Spends Night in Cell.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Aug. 7.—After spending several congenial hours with the President of the Pullman Company, Medill McCormick of the Chicago Tribune told Judge Shove in police court he did not know what transpired until he awoke in a police cell here.

A Pullman porter, however, declared that Mr. McCormick had retired, and then arose and kept the passengers awake with his noise. This was why he ejected him from the train at Syracuse, clad only in his pajamas. At the station, someone furnished a pair of trousers and shoes, and it took McCormick some time to convince the Judge that he was really the man. He was released.

COMMITTEE IS PLANNING TO INDICT SULZER

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—Indictment rather than impeachment is now understood to be the aim of the Frawley investigating committee, which today resumes its investigation at the City Hall of Governor Sulzer's private and political financial activities, particularly as to campaign contributions.

The committee holds that in view of the alleged incomplete statement of campaign contributions and expenses filed by Mr. Sulzer and his agent, Louis Sarecky, both can be indicted for perjury, as well as for violating the law requiring a full report. The latter is made a misdemeanor, punishable by one year in prison or $1,000 fine, or both.

"I don't care to say at this time," stated Eugene L. Richards, counsel for the committee, today, "that if the Governor were convicted of a misdemeanor he would automatically cease to be Governor. Certain it is, however, that in such an event the people would demand the Governor's removal."

The committee today will continue to investigate the Governor's campaign accounts. Wall Street activities, and possibly into some of his business undertakings in Alaska and Latin America, it is expected to call more bankers and brokers, but Jacob H. Schiff probably will not be asked to testify, as his $2,500 check shows on its face what it was for.

Adjournment probably will be taken then to Albany, where Rev. Olaf R. Miller will be given a chance to prove his statement that three Tammany Senators, in 1910, "one a member of the Frawley committee," solicited a bribe to kill a bill.

Governor Sulzer declined last night, in Glen Falls, to talk about the testimony produced by the committee.

FOSS IS GIVEN CONDITIONS OF MEN'S RETURN

Governor Foss and the State Board of Arbitration were officially notified today that the officials of the unions on strike in the Hyde Park plants were willing to recommend to the strikers that they return to work under the following conditions:

All strikers will return to work under the same hours, wages and working conditions that existed previous to the strike being called if Governor Foss would agree to meet the shop committees of the unions and take up the alleged or existing grievances and in the event of any grievances remaining unsettled at the end of sixty days as a result of these conferences that they be referred to the State Board of Arbitration with the signed agreement that its decision will be final and binding on both parties.

This offer was drafted by the national officers of the unions involved at the Foss plants in Hyde Park and was sent to the Governor by William Jennings Patron, attorney for the unions. A similar notice was sent the State Board of Arbitration, which was asked to use its good offices with the Governor to have him accept the offer made.

Organizer Hall of the Machinists' Union and Organizer Treble of the Patternmakers' Association said if the Governor agreed to the compromise offer they would call a mass meeting of the Hyde Park strikers and extend their influence to have the offer accepted by them and have work resumed tomorrow morning.

Organizer Treble said: "If Governor Foss will agree to this compromise, which has been drafted on lines suggested by him on several occasions, we will use our influence with the strikers to return to work as soon as word is received from Governor Foss that he has accepted the offer.

"We have tried to meet the Governor more than half way. The question is now up to him."

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—Laura MacDonald Stallo, heir with her sister, Helena, to the millions of Alexander MacDonald, railroad builder and oil magnate, has won the first point in the fight to compel the Metropolitan Trust Company to repay more than $1,000,000 to the MacDonald estate. Surrogate Cohalan has removed the Metropolitan Trust Company as administrator of the MacDonald estate and directed the company to file an accounting of its stewardship. The Court also declared Miss Stallo may present her case to a jury and let the jury decide if she and her sister are entitled to a million dollar present from the trust company.

A burglar fingering the window latch in the rear of Mrs. Charles Roberts' home at No. 33 Sarilla street, Quincy, early today, woke the dog inside, and "Jack" barked. The burglar fled. He went to the rear door of Benjamin Macomber's home on Upland road and tried the knob, but accidentally rang the electric bell, and when he heard someone coming to the door escaped with eagerness. He was 5 feet 6 inches tall and wore dark clothes and a cap.

Submarines' Feat Alarms Frenchmen

PARIS, Aug. 7.—The French government was thrown into consternation today by the unprecedented feat of a submarine flotilla in penetrating the supposed impregnable harbor at Brest. The fleet crawled through the water under the very guns of the great forts guarding the approach to the harbor, and despite the use of every scientific defensive device known to modern warfare.

AVIATOR CODY KILLED BY FALL IN ENGLAND

ALDERSHOT, Eng., Aug. 7.—Colonel Samuel F. Cody, a former citizen of the United States and one of the most famous aviators in the world, was killed with a passenger here today while testing a new aeroplane over the military aerodrome. These two fatalities bring the aviation death roll up to 205.

The machine was of Cody's own construction with which he intended to attempt a flight across the Atlantic. Two sons of the dead aviator witnessed the tragedy. One of them rushed forward and threw himself on his father's body, then fainted.

Colonel Cody was one of the pioneer airmen and was commissioned by the British government to build up the aviation corps of the imperial army, a feat which he fulfilled to the perfect satisfaction of the War office.

Cody was a relative of William F. (Buffalo Bill) Cody and in appearance resembled that famous American. The name of the passenger who was killed with Cody was Evans.

The aviator protested against any one accompanying him, saying that he was going to try out a new machine and the risk would be great. Evans was insistent and finally Cody relented.

After a grass-cutting circuit, Cody shot the machine upward and soon the car was 1,000 feet in the air. Spectators saw the machine begin to wobble, as though one of the planes had buckled.

Suddenly it turned over on its side and plunged downward. With a thudding crash the machine struck the earth and the gasoline tank burst, scattering the fuel over the bodies of the two men. Cody and Evans were rushed to a hospital in the automobile, but life had already been extinguished.

Say Morgan Forced Mellen to Resign

John Pierpont Morgan's hostility to Charles S. Mellen's decision to float a big new issue of bonds is today said to have been the real reason back of the latter's resignation as president of the New Haven Railroad, according to persons close to the directorate.

Edna Goodrich to Be Bride of a Duke

Says He Gave Her $20,000 Necklace and Costly French Bull.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—Modestly displaying a $20,000 pearl necklace and a valuable French bull called Fraisette, Edna Goodrich, who is an ex-wife of Nat Goodwin, declares she is soon to marry a Duke. Dog and gems, she said on her arrival here from London, were gifts from her mysterious fiance.

She did not deny that she may wed on New Year's day in London.

Girls Is to Blame, Says Arrested Man

HAVERHILL, Aug. 7.—The girl he was in love with told Henry W. Jarvis to "go out and make good," and he was arrested early today, charged with robbing poor boxes, as a result.

Patrolman Eugene Radcliffe caught him outside the St. Joseph's French Catholic Church. There was in his pockets the handle of a chisel and $1.22 in pennies, nickels and dimes. In the church yard, the blade of the chisel was found, and the poor box had been pried open and rifled.

Jarvis told the police he came from Montreal, went to New York and worked as an electrician till he fell in love. The girl, he said, told him to quit his trade and go out and make good. He was held in $500 for the Grand Jury.

Bustles Are Worn Somewhere Still

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—In this day of diaphanous attire, straight and clinging lines, it hardly sounds reasonable, but there are two manufacturers in this city making bustles, according to Phillips' Business Directory of 1913, which came from the printers yesterday. It is evident that in some heathen country the weaker sex are slaves to fashion and still wear bustles.

SUES BISHOP LAWRENCE FOR DEFAMATION

Bishop William A. Lawrence of the Episcopal Diocese of Massachusetts was today sued for $10,000 by Effie A. Carter of Wayland.

The woman charges Bishop Lawrence with defamation of character, false arrest, ejectment from the church, and refusal to administer the communion.

The Rev. Arthur B. Papineau of the Episcopal Church of Wayland was also sued for $10,000 by the same woman on the same charges. Attachments in these suits were filed several weeks ago.

She claims she was confronted by constables when she tried to enter the Wayland Church on May 14, 1911, and the church at Cochituate on the Sunday following.

She charges that she was forbidden for communion in the Wayland Church on Sunday, August 20, 1911, and that the service was denied her, without cause or a hearing. She says this held her up to public ridicule and shame, and gave the impression that her life and character were not as they should be.

The other side claim the plaintiff disturbed the congregation by her ritualistic demonstrations.

Szechenyi Divorce Suit Soon to Come

Count Reported Swindled of Over $4,000,000 of Wife's Fortune.

PARIS, Aug. 7.—Despite the emphatic denials of Count and Countess Szechenyi that they have had any matrimonial trouble, reports persisted today that the Countess will soon bring a suit for divorce.

The loss of between $4,000,000 and $6,000,000 of her fortune by the Count in a mining swindle, in which he was outrapped, is also asserted.

Pension Faithful Street Car Horses

About forty German and English students arrive on the Cymric today, on their way to attend the International Students' Congress at Cornell on August 29. Tomorrow noon they will be the guests of Mayor Fitzgerald at the City Club, and on Saturday they will visit Harvard University.

PREDICTS A 28 DAY JOURNEY AROUND GLOBE

HARTFORD, Ct., Aug. 7.—Approximately twenty-eight days will be the record which will be established for girdling the world within a very few years, in the opinion of Daniel E. Bidwell of this city, who holds the record for circling the earth travelling toward the West.

Mr. Bidwell made this assertion today in commenting on the record of John Henry Mears, who has just finished a record-breaking trip, travelling toward the East.

The new record Mr. Bidwell believes will be made by discarding railroad trains and travelling by a relay of airships over the land.

He suggests that via airship schedule will be something like this: from New York to Fishguard, England about six days; from Fishguard to Yokohama, via airship about ten days, from Yokohama to Vancouver about nine days; from Vancouver to East Orange, N. J., via airship, about three days; from East Orange to New York via automobile. Traveling to the west Mr. Bidwell made the trip in forty-seven days and twenty-two hours.

LIND, BEARING PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE TO MEXICO, SPEEDS SOUTH ON U. S. BATTLESHIP

If the Mexican president carries out his threat, Mexico will have accomplished what in the eyes of international usage usually constitutes a casus belli.

Expect Line Tomorrow.

Following out the new aggressive policy of the Mexican government, a delegation will wait upon Mr. Lind upon his arrival in this city, probably Saturday, and the attitude of the Mexican government toward the United States will be outlined then in unmistakable terms.

The following statement was issued to the press today by Senor Aldape:

The Mexican Department of Foreign Affairs has sent a note to charge d'affaires of the United States embassy, Nelson O'Shaughnessy, stating by order of the President that if Mr. John Lind, who, the Mexican government is informed, is coming to Mexico entrusted with a mission from President Wilson, does not establish in due manner his official character before the Mexican chancellory, or if he is not the bearer of recognition of the Mexican government by that of the United States, his sojourn in this republic will not be grateful nor satisfactory to this government.

"Mexico for Mexicans."

This was the first time that Huerta formally recognized Mr. Lind as an ambassador from the United States President. To some extent the action of Huerta has the approval of some of the Americans here, because it establishes plainly the position of the Mexican government. Otherwise the suspense attending the coming of Mr. Lind and the consequences which may follow would only be prolonged.

In addition to coming as a special investigator, Mr. Lind is commissioned to act as peacemaker between the leaders of the various revolutionary factions, but it is doubtful if Huerta will allow an alien to act in such a capacity.

"Mexican affairs for Mexicans" was the laconic remark made by President Huerta today to his followers in Congress who called at the National Palace. Previous to the statement issued today by the Mexican Foreign Minister, the United States embassy had received the following note from Secretary of State Bryan:

"A Mission of Peace."

You may say to the Mexican foreign minister that Governor Lind comes to Mexico on a mission of peace and that President Wilson feels that his presence there will contribute towards a settlement of existing difficulties. The Mexican government should await the President's communication and not give weight to misrepresentations published in sensational newspapers.

Not only in this city but throughout the entire republic increased antagonism toward Americans is being shown. Huerta and his advisers believe that if war should be declared it would have the result in making a unit of all the revolutionary bands so that a solid front could be presented against any foreign foe. Within the past seven months the government has placed orders for 100,000 rifles and a commensurate supply of ammunition as well as mountain and field guns.

WILSON PREPARED TO FORCE HUERTA OUT OF OFFICE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—The first show of hostility to John Lind, the President's personal representative now speeding on his way to Mexico, came from Mexico City today.

It was expected that General Huerta would make some move to block the movement toward mediation with the constitutionalists that has been devised by President Wilson. If the de facto government, however, should deliberately aim to poison Mexican public opinion against the good offices of the United States, even before the arrival of Mr. Lind, President Wilson will realize that he has been dealing too justly with General Huerta and, that a more drastic policy is required.

If the Federalists decline to take Mr. Lind's mission seriously, the President will find his well intentioned plan of restoring peace in Mexico blocked in advance. General Huerta probably will find that if he thus insults the White House there will be steel in American foreign policy as well as "grape juice."

The White House is cognizant of the fact that it can with the exercise of a little diplomatic pressure oust General Huerta from the presidency in a comparatively short time. It is this club which the United States may wield before intervention becomes a possibility.

If Mr. Lind is to go to Mexico city with the entire capital hostile to him before his arrival owing to Huerta influence, officials believe the United States will not be slow to adopt retaliatory measures.

Special Representative Lind sailed from Galveston at 10 o'clock today on the battleship New Hampshire for Vera Cruz. From Vera Cruz he will go direct to Mexico City to lay the message of President Wilson before Huerta.

That Lind is carrying an important communication from President Wilson to President Huerta was admitted by Secretary of State Bryan today.

The secretary also admitted that the embassy at Mexico City has been instructed to request President Huerta "to go slow" until it learns the tenor of Mr. Lind's communication.

MEXICAN REBELS JOIN THE PROTEST AGAINST JOHN LIND

PARIS, Aug. 7.—The Mexican Constitutionalists here, while bitter against Provisional President Huerta, resent the sending of John Lind into Mexico by the United States. Their committee today issued the following statement:

We learn that John Lind has been sent to Mexico as a mediator, personally representing President Wilson. The Constitutionalists here, while appreciating the correct attitude of President Wilson, energetically protest against the proposed mediation of the United States.

We wish no foreign intrusion, whatever its form. Americans never had mere interest in Mexico than now, and, if they think their interests endangered, almost the worst means they could take to protect themselves would be to wound Mexico's self-respect by semi-official pressure.

Only military intervention could be worse than attempted mediation, as that would mean war.

We repeat that the Constitutionalists will not treat with Huerta. He is doomed to annihilation, and it will come all the quicker if the United States interferes.

Organists Ban "Rag Time" in Church Hymnals

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Aug. 7.—There will be no more "curly tail" hymns, rag time hymns or "German band hymns" in any of the church hymnals if the delegates to the national convention of organists here have their way. For they are against the retention of such hymns. Nearly all the old time favorites, such as "Keep your hand on the throttle, and your eye on the rail," that go with a ringle and jingle, are placed under the ban.

DEATH TRIAL BOOMS WOMAN POET'S WORKS

PARIS, Aug. 7.—So great has become the public demand for the poetical works of Mme. Crespy, who is on trial at Agen charged with murdering Abbe Lachau, a young priest, her lover, that the printers are preparing several new editions.

A verdict may be reached in the murder trial today. It has developed that Mme. Crespy fell in love with the young abbe while she was confessing indiscretions which resulted in her husband securing a divorce.

However, a number of priests have come forward to testify that the abbe, seeing the error of his ways, had renounced the woman and was preparing for the extreme penance for a year when he met his death.

Charge Man Ate His Wife's Thumb

Husband Held in Waltham for Gruesome Assault.

James Hill of Jersey City, N. J., bit off his wife's left thumb, the police of Waltham say, and then swallowed it.

Hill was in Waltham District court today, charged with assault and battery on his wife. He was held in $3,000 for the Grand Jury.

Mrs. Hill is employed in the home of Frank Bailey on Mt. Auburn street, Watertown. Hill came on from Jersey City and Mrs. Hill feared trouble. She told the Baileys, who had Patrolman William Coleman in the house, ready to stop any trouble.

On a scream from the kitchen, Coleman rushed in and found Hill holding his wife down on the floor, with her left thumb in his mouth. Coleman dragged Hill off from his wife and the thumb was severed from the hand.

As the thumb could not be found, after Hill was subdued, Mrs. Hill was forced to the ghastly conclusion that her husband had swallowed it.

FIND BROCKTON WIFE WHO WILL GET FORTUNE

Mrs. Thomas H. Smalley of No. 153 Spring street, Brockton, came home today from Brant Rock, where she was summering, to start for Cincinnati and claim the estate of her father, who has just died there intestate. The father and daughter had not met for years.

The father left an ample fortune. It is reported. Yesterday City Marshal James F. Morey received a letter asking him to locate "Laura Foster, married name unknown."

The letter, from Mrs. Elizabeth Rake of No. 1328 Clay street, Cincinnati, stated that the woman's father was dead and that unless "Laura Foster" claimed the estate at once, it would revert to the city.

Mrs. Rake added that she was Mr. Foster's housekeeper. Marshal Morey investigated and found that "Laura Foster" had married Thomas H. Smalley. He located Mrs. Smalley and notified her of her good fortune.

MAYOR URGES EXTENSION OF FIRE LIMITS

"I believe that human life is above the dollar, and that is the reason I have urged the extension of the city fire limits," declared Mayor Fitzgerald in a surprise speech before the committee of the City Council on fire hazard, at the public hearing on that subject.

"What would be the situation if a fire like that of July 4 in Dorchester occurred on a windy day, with a big conflagration in East Boston or some other section of the city, a four-alarm fire in each? The disaster that would ensue in human life, as well as property, is too appalling to contemplate."

While the Mayor and scores of others demanded that the fire limits be set further out, remonstrants to the project, twelve of whom were present, will be given an opportunity to advance their side of the question at an adjourned meeting of the committee next Thursday.

"I look for action on the part of the City Council," said Mayor Fitzgerald. "It is twenty-five years since the limits were extended and I think the builders of wooden structures have been allowed reasonable latitude. Certainly no injustice has been done them when we consider the fact that every big city in the world, outside of Boston, has practically forbidden wooden construction within the physical limits of the city. I do not deprecate going as far as this. Make a reasonable extension in accordance with the plans decided by Fire Commissioner Cole and I think every thinking citizen, who is interested in the problem of life in this city, will agree that the proposition is a fair one.

"Other cities do not permit such construction as we have in Boston and will not permit such a fire hazard. Why, when I gaze up Walnut avenue I shudder. There is not a spectacle like it in the civilized world. It's a pity, it's a pity, if the city of Boston cannot place human life above the dollar."

Chrence H. Blackall, chairman of the committee on fire hazard of the Chamber of Commerce, was the first speaker in favor of the extension of the fire limits, and declared that the Chamber stood by its original resolution that the limits should be extended to the whole city.

Fire Commissioner Cole followed him and urged a reasonable extension of the limits as outlined in his report to the Mayor. They are as follows:

All of Charlestown, all of South Boston, all that part of East Boston south and west of Trumbull street, and all that part of Boston north and east of a line beginning at the intersection of Columbia road and Old Harbor.

Francis G. Powell, ex-Alderman Francis R. Bangs, representing the Boston Real Estate Exchange; Sumner Clement, Gotham Dunn of the State Fire Protective Association, Thomas F. Rice, George H. Cherry and President John F. Duffy of the Mattapan Improvement Association also favored extension of the limits.

REP. DAVID F. SULLIVAN OF HOLYOKE.

This is a Democratic Representative who represents the people and not the railroad. When the bill was before the House of Representatives that gave the New Haven monopoly control over more than half the trolleys in western Massachusetts, Mr. Sullivan voted against it.

This bill was CONDEMNED BY THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY PLATFORM, and by all right thinking men, such as the Tax Commissioner, the Railroad Commission, the Public Franchise League, the Boston Chamber of Commerce, the Interstate Commerce Commission and every leading newspaper. Governor Foss said in his veto of the bill: "This bill offers only a pretense of a consideration in exchange for the favors sought, and under it very few trolley lines need ever be built in the counties which expect to benefit by the true representative of a western district knew that he was right.

If the forty-five Democratic traitors to the people had followed Mr. Sullivan's example, the Democratic party would now be the leading party in the State.

G. O. P TALKS M'CALL TODAY, VICE BENTON

A conference of Republican leaders with former Congressman Samuel W. McCall of Winchester is scheduled for today, when it is reported a plan to make him a candidate for the G. O. P. nomination for the Governorship will be definitely gone over. This follows the third recent meeting of the former Congressman and Governor Foss, the details of which neither will discuss today.

The idea of substituting McCall, who was defeated for the United States Senatorship by John W. Weeks of Newton, for Colonel Everett C. Benton is declared to be gaining favor with certain elements of the G. O. P. Benton, however, insists he will be a candidate to the end.

Colonel Benton, who, at this time, is the only avowed candidate for the Republican nomination, refuses to entertain the suggestion of the McCall candidacy.

"There is absolutely nothing to it," he said. "I know Mr. McCall is going to support me."

Mr. McCall has been busy with literary work for several months and has said he was done with politics. A determined effort is to be made, however, by G. O. P. leaders, it is declared, to get him to consent to the launching of his candidacy.

Hatfield Admits Plan.

Chairman Hatfield, of the G. O. P. State Committee, admits the substitution of McCall for Benton is being discussed, and there is much sounding of sentiment in progress.

Ex-Congressman McCall, even before his call on Governor Foss, is declared to have been working himself to a point where in the event of a genuine call to come to the front, he would not put mufflers on his ears.

The call for the McCall candidacy is based upon the belief among its advocates that Colonel Benton cannot carry the primaries against the Governor.

The conference between Mr. McCall and the Governor did not lead to the practical conclusion that Governor Foss will support the former for Governor. This is inferred from the words of Mr. McCall, who said that no definite results had come from the conference. He said that the Governor had sent for him. They were in conference for half an hour.

Bird Replies to Foss.

Charles Sumner Bird, the Progressive leader, is out with a statement in reply to Foss' recent letter suggesting that he enter the Republican primaries against Benton. The Bird letter contained a kind declination of the suggestion, and a pertinent inquiry as to why Foss did not do it himself.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—The itinerary and personnel of the party which will accompany Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Leiter on their proposed trip around the world in Howard Gould's steam yacht Niagara are announced today. The Leiters have planned one of the longest continuous cruises ever made by a yacht. They will be away a year.

The start will be made from New York in September.

Mr. and Mrs. Leiter and their young son—Joseph Leiter, Jr., and John Leiter—will make the entire trip. In Europe they will be joined by Mrs. Leiter's parents and sisters, Colonel and Mrs. John R. Williams and the Misses Frances and Dorothy Williams. They have also arranged to meet former Representative and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, the latter a daughter of Colonel Roosevelt, and have them as guests on part of the cruise.

'Votes' Inscriptions Cover Albert Hall

Prime Minister to Receive Suffragette Delegation.

LONDON, Aug. 7.—Early today militant suffragettes chalked "Votes for women" all over the outside of Albert Hall, where the International medical congress is holding its annual convention. Unusual precautions were taken to prevent women from entering the hall.

The prime minister has consented to receive a deputation of the National Union of Women's Suffrage Societies. They wish to lay before him information regarding the recent women's march to London.

Mrs. Edith Rigby, wife of a prominent physician, who was sentenced to jail in Liverpool in July for incendiarism and bomb making, was released today after a hunger strike.

Militant suffragettes burned a pavilion and haystack today. Before the pavilion had been fired, a big banner was stretched on poles. On it was the inscription: "Just to remind you that Mrs. Pankhurst is dying."

ARRAIGN THREE CHARGED WITH WINTHROP RIOT

Police reserves, with advance knowledge that an attack by gangsters was planned on the New Winthrop Hotel at Winthrop Beach, where a dance was being conducted by the Roxbury Ladies' Aid and Fuel Society, a Jewish organization, broke up a repetition of the disturbances of Tuesday night, with the result that James Larose, twenty-two, of East Boston; Ross L. Batchelder, seventeen, of No. 491 Shirley street, Winthrop, and William McKinley, of No. 29 Wiltshire street, Winthrop, were charged today with disturbing the peace.

Following the first riot, with which the police, taken unexpectedly, could not cope, a second disturbance had been carefully planned, and two gangs of young men, one going by way of Sturgis street and the other by way of Irving street, were to meet in front of the hotel for the attack on the hotel.

The first party was stopped shortly after the trouble started by Sergeant Douglass and a squad of policemen who were in ambush. Meanwhile a second squad had been sent to meet the Irving street gang.

In a free fight which ensued Larose and Batchelder were captured by the police, and McKinley was caught while he was fleeing.

An automobile police van was waiting on a side street, and while crowds of over a hundred men tried to rescue the arrested youths the officers forced their way to the wagon and carried the men to the station.

Earlier in the evening an unknown man was beaten by a gang on Shirley street, but was rescued by friends before the police arrived. Officers declared that a more serious charge, that of inciting to riot, would be preferred against the men.

Boston Women Who Have Made Good

No. 15—MRS. J. H. CLEMENT

Mrs. Josephine Hill Clement is a dramatic dynamo, with nerves on springs and possessing a mind fertile with future plans, while the present is kept continually humming.

She is theatrical manager, motion picture proprietor, and publicity agent all in one.

Six years ago she knew little or nothing about the theatrical business; today she sets the pace for many managers who have watched her success in Boston with increasing wonder.

"Beauty is my religion," she asserts, "and upon this my creed—that all things should be beautiful—I base my managerial activities.

"To me beauty is the basis of fine acting, successful pictures and efficient management."

"There is in every soul," she continued, "an inherent love of the beautiful; supply this natural craving and you succeed, whether it is in running a theatre or in building a home."

Inspires Loyalty.

Mrs. Clement's interpretation of beauty is broad and includes what is efficient, as well as what is aesthetic.

In dealing with her band of players she emphasizes her doctrine.

"We are more like a family than a company," says the leading lady. "We work together for the common good, using what talents we have that each production may be an artistic success. We play parts, sing, dance, play instruments, mend our costumes, and even help on the stage if necessary, and we do it because we like it and know that our own individual successes depend upon the larger achievement. Mrs. Clement can get us to do anything and we work in the spirit with which she inspires us."

This statement from one of the company who has been with Mrs. Clement three years illustrates well the results that are being attained through Mrs. Clement's philosophy of beauty.

Mrs. Clement has recognized the modern trend and sees that the spirit of co-operation and of mutual helpfulness is essential to theatrical success as it is to other kinds of business.

Aspirant Need Encouragement.

"It is my belief," she declares, "that young people with natural ability do not get the encouragement they should have, and that is why America is not turning out as great artists as she should. New England is full of young aspirants who, if given encouragement of the right sort, would quickly develop into successes on the stage or in opera."

Mrs. Clement has fought her way to success through many discouragements, but those who have watched—day after day—the crowds pouring into her little theatre, know that she has made a success during the five years she has acted as a theatrical manager.

Senator Warren Scores Democrats

Declares They Are "Hedging" on Tariff Program.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—Charging the Democrats with "hedging" and with being doubtful of the success of their tariff program, Senator Warren of Wyoming today criticized statements made by Democratic senators to the effect that Republican senators were in a conspiracy to bring about hard times during the consideration or following the passage of the pending tariff bill.

"I myself would many times rather see the present dominant party retain the reins of government for a long time, with continued prosperity equal to that which the nation has enjoyed under Republican rule, than to again endure the hardships of the period following the election of 1892 and continuing until 1896," said Senator Warren.

Senator Warren said that he had received thousands of letters during the last three months containing expressions of fears for industries of this country should the Democratic tariff bill become a law.

LETTERS MAKE PROSECUTOR THINK NURSE KRILL WAS BRIDE OF POISONED UTICA PHYSICIAN

UTICA, N. Y., Aug. 7.—With the beautiful dark-eyed nurse all unconscious of the fact that the innermost secrets of her life and heart are in the hands of the State's Attorney, District Attorney Fuller and his assistants are today delving into the darkest recesses of the romance of Emma Elizabeth Krill and Stanley E. Tron, through the medium of the voluminous correspondence with which her trunks were found to be laden when they came into the prosecutor's hands.

Scores upon scores of letters bare the record of the years of intimacy between the comely nurse and the physician she is accused of having murdered, are in District Attorney Fuller's possession. Already it is whispered in the attorney's office that incriminating evidence is beginning to appear in that portion of the correspondence which has already been examined.

On the face of them they bear indirect testimony to the very point the prosecution is most anxious to establish—that Miss Krill and Dr. Tron were secretly married in New York, and were husband and wife at the time of his death.

Many of the letters are addressed to Mrs. Stanley E. Tron. As many more bear the superscription Miss Emma E. Krill.

Second Theory Conflicts.

The other theory is that the nurse had shifted her affections to another man, a druggist in New York, and wanted to rid herself of her former companion in order to become the wife of her new flame. This assumption, however, conflicts with Miss Krill's own statement that she had repeatedly besought the doctor to marry her up to the time of his death, and had continued to remain with him in the hope that he would fulfill the numerous promises he gave her to make her his wife.

Some of the State's officials are inclined today to believe that the reverse was true—that it was Dr. Tron who had fallen out of love with Miss Krill and in love with another woman, and that the nurse in a paroxysm of jealousy, poisoned him to forestall his marriage with her rival.

This is after a fashion substantiated by the story told by the Italian druggist who keeps a store in the same building where Dr. Tron and Miss Krill lived.

From this it would appear that the nurse exercised a potent fascination over the young physician, which he repeatedly tried to fight off and as often yielded to, while he recognized its baneful influence, perhaps the influence that militated against his success as a practitioner.

Ran Away From Home.

Her first experience with the world outside of her home dates from her fifteenth year, when she ran away. Seven years before her mother had set her a dangerous example by disappearing from the Krill home in Cornwall at the same time that a friend of hers, Dr. Friedenburg, vanished. Emma's departure was not a sensational one, but once away she refused to return, and an effort her father made to win her back proved fruitle, for she left home a second time and for good.

How she drifted into nursing no one knows, but she held positions first at the Middletown State Asylum, then at the City Hospital in Hudson, N. Y.

To New York came Emma then. Her handsome face and winning personality made it easy for her to cultivate the acquaintance of doctors who could further her aims, and she soon found herself in one of the foreign hospitals. There she met Dr. Stanley E. Tron, and when he was transferred to the Lying-in Hospital, Miss Krill followed him.

When Miss Krill went up to Cornwall on a visit to her sisters she jubilantly made the announcement that she was soon to be the bride of Dr. Tron.

MISS EMMA E. KRILL, the pretty Utica nurse girl, who steadfastly defends her innocence of the poisoning of Dr. Stanley E. Tron.

Honor Maine Jesuits of 300 Years Ago

Bar Harbor Exercises Recall Pioneers of Faith in America.

BAR HARBOR, Me., Aug. 7.—Bishop Walsh of Portland preached the dedicatory sermon at exercises here commemorating the landing at Fernald Point in May, 300 years ago, of thirty Jesuit fathers, laymen from France, who formed the first Catholic church at that time on the continent, and who a few months later were killed or taken prisoners by the English from Virginia.

The exercises included the dedication of an edifice for the Church of St. Sauveur. The special guest of honor was the apostolic delegate, the Most Rev. John Bonzano, D. D., who came from Washington, designated as the representative of Pope Pius X.

Seek Confidence Man in Chelsea

The Chelsea police are seeking a "Mr. Reed," who, they allege, worked a confidence game on a Chelsea grocer, when he asked that goods be delivered at his home, No. 24 Congress avenue, and that the clerk bring change for a $10 bill. A boy was soon at the home with the groceries and change. The man took the goods and the money and disappeared.

Commerce Board Hits Banana Tax

Mears made the last stage of the journey, from Cleveland, on a flyer held twenty minutes for him.

SKY IS LIMIT ON CAPE COD "WAR" DAMAGE

He, Wife, go get the pen and ink
And paper by the ton;
And then sit down and help me think
Of what them soldiers done.
For all that they put on the blink
We'll charge 'em, ten to one.
"A pie is worth a dollar, sure—
We'll get it, never fear—
Our grub is home-made, rich and pure,
And taxes cost us dear.
But I see one financial cure—
The War Adjuster's here."

(CAPE COD CAROLS.)

MIDDLEBORO, Aug. 7.—Cape Cod farmers are matching their wits against those of the War Adjuster. It is a shrewd combat.

The War Adjuster is the official who follows in the wake of the militia war game and adjusts any damage the soldiers committed.

If a strategic battle was fought on a corn field the owner of the field is entitled to compensation and he gets it.

If a company of hungry soldiers raid a housewife's pantry she is entitled to pay for her pies and doughnuts.

But "war game" prices beat feminine ones, for it is a long time between war games, and the farmers need the money.

Some of the claimants are quite reasonable. They don't expect that a broken hencoop entitles them to a new farm. But the War Adjuster finds others who take the sky for their limit in making out damage bills.

One woman wanted $1 each for her pies. The War Adjuster sampled her pastry, then compromised on 50 cents.

Another woman told the Adjuster she sold doughnuts and milk to the boys at reduced rates and tried to collect the difference from the State. The Adjuster could not see it her way.

One fence, which was alleged to have been riddled by a terrific bombardment of blank cartridges, was found by the Adjuster to have been torn down before the manoeuvres began.

But the farmers are doing pretty well. Some of them hope to make the war game pay for painting the barn and leave enough for a new set of horse blankets.

For a year letters have been missed. Postmaster Hoyt sent some letters through the mails, containing marked bills. It is claimed these marked bills were found in George's pockets when he was arrested. He was held for the Boston postal authorities.

Object to Hosiery Display on Cars

Brockton Women in Tight Gowns Fight for Lower Steps.

BROCKTON, Aug. 7.—Enforced display of hosiery while boarding street cars is the cause of a crusade begun against the high steps on local trolley cars by Brockton women. The new dresses are more or less tight. The women refuse to go back to the more roomy gowns and be out of style. Instead the railways must have lower steps.

Mrs. Fred A. Simmons, president of the Brockton Woman's Club, and Mrs. Helen C. Ford of the Waltman Woman's Club may lead the fight for a less pronounced display of hosiery.

Flee from Tariff to Rocking Chairs

Senators Escape to Veranda to Avoid Intense Heat.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—The north end of the Capitol building resembles the upper deck of a Sunday boat, with its roomy veranda filled with wicker rocking chairs occupied by Senators wearied of tariff debate and trying to get cool.

The idea originated with Sergeant-at-Arms Higgins. He baited the place with two or three rockers. The plan was so popular that the building could not furnish sufficient chairs to meet the demand.

NEW TREATY ENDS SECOND BALKAN WAR

ATHENS, Aug. 7.—"Peace once again reigns in the Balkans."

This is the keynote of a message received by Foreign Minister Coromilas today from Bucharest.

Greece profits most of all from the Balkan wars. She gains enormous prestige as well as 15,000 square miles of additional territory, including Salonika, the chief port of what was formerly Turkey in Europe.

It is officially announced that the new Greek frontier will extend to the mouth of the Mesta river through Thrace to Montebelles thence to the Aegean sea. This comprises the important cities of Drama and Vavala.

Greece and Roumania have signed a treaty, making allies of each other.

By the acquisitions of Greece and by the treaty of alliance, the Hellenic nation takes the most important place she has occupied in European affairs for a century.

Have you ever looked at a rainbow without wishing you could find the pot of gold at the end of it?

There is always a keen edge to this wish, chiefly because you know that before you could get well started the rainbow's end would vanish into thin air.

Nevertheless, there are a good many people who pass most of their lives chasing rainbows and imaginary pots of gold.

They think because they are next to impossible to capture they are somehow worth more.

If these people would cast their eyes on earth and get to work to capture some of the pots of gold in the shape of opportunities that are passing before them they would be a good deal better off both in mind and pocket.

The first thing you are going to say is this: "Show us a pot of gold we can capture."

We accept the challenge. The pot of gold is right under your nose, Mr. and Mrs. Rainbow Chaser and Master and Miss Rainbow Chaser. It isn't up in the sky trailing off in splendid colors into a rain cloud—it's right at your hand.

$1,000 in gold—a good-sized pot—is yours if you are the winner of the capital prize offered by this paper in the Picture Puzzle Contest.

You don't have to start off with an umbrella and rubber boots through the rain over hills and valleys and rivers to get it either.

All you have to do is to solve seventy-five puzzle pictures more correctly than any one else.

And if you are not successful in carrying off the first prize, there are ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY-FOUR OTHER CASH PRIZES OPEN TO YOU.

How is that for a collection of rainbows with real pots of gold—not imaginary ones?

The American furnishes the awards and leaves you to furnish the brains to win them.

It assumes that you are willing to spend some effort in solving the pictures, with such magnificent prizes as rewards, and it places at your service the guide, with answers to all the pictures in the contest.

So get busy, here is a real, flesh-and-blood with the pot of gold at its end and a guide with directions how to get there IN THE SHORTEST TIME AND OVER THE CORRECT ROAD.

It makes the imaginary rainbow look rather foolish, doesn't it?

The best you could hope for with the make-believe rainbow was a POSSIBLE REWARD at the end to pay you for the trouble of getting there.

Here you have in actuality ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY-FIVE PRIZES laid at your feet.

Besides the capital prize, $1,000 in gold, there's a second prize of $800 in gold, a third prize of $500 in gold, and so on down the list of one hundred and fifty-two more awards.

Send for the back numbers you have missed and the official guide. Back pictures may be obtained at the regular rates of the American—that is, one cent for each daily picture and five cents for each Sunday picture. There is no extra charge for postage.

The official guide may be obtained for the modest sum of twenty-five cents, or five cents extra if sent by mail.

Don't let this opportunity escape you. The time to act is today.

The pots of gold at the end of a real rainbow are yours if you want them badly enough to win them.

GRAND TRUNK TO FINISH NEW ENGLAND LINE

Papers filed today in the Supreme Court show for the first time that the New England extension of the Grand Trunk is to be completed in spite of months of suspension and many obstacles due to railroad manipulation.

An order has been given John Marsch, the Chicago contractor, to proceed with the work which he was ordered to stop some time ago. Marsch's orders at that time were so sudden that he entered suit for $1,500,000 against the Southern New England Railroad, a subsidiary of the Grand Trunk for damages for the suspension and violation of the contract.

The court developments indicate that this suit of Marsch's has been settled out of court amicably.

These facts are revealed in statements by the Southern New England Company today in another suit, in which it has been summoned as trustee. This is a suit brought by a sub-contractor against Marsch, the general contractor.

BARONESS HUNTS IN VAIN FOR HER HERO OF AUTOMOBILE ROMANCE

Baroness Ursula Barbara Von Kalinsowaki.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—Does James Hurley exist?

Again the question comes hurtling over from St. Louis.

He does.

There are, for the benefit of the Baroness Ursula Barbara von Kalinsowski's general information, just an even half dozen of James' in the New York city directory. There is James, the janitor; James, the automobile man; James, the foreman; James, the packer; James, the printer, and even James, the fireman.

But of James Hurleys, millionaires and railroad builders, the directory is innocent as a child.

And as the latter sort of a James Hurley is the only one who will exactly fill the bill, the Baroness returns to the Waldorf-Astoria from St. Louis no richer in real information than she was when she went West to become the blushing bride of the American, James Hurley, of New York and St. Louis.

Waiting for James.

The Baroness, accompanied by her brother and two dogs of high degree who revel in the meteorological titles of Dunder and Blitzen, is back to see if her James Hurley is waiting at the Holland House to tell the clerk to add "and wife" to the Hurley registry. The Holland House is sure that James Hurley has not been within its gates for, to, the past year. The other big hotels find no trace of James the elusive.

Baroness Ursula went West two weeks ago on the theory that she was to meet and marry Mr. Hurley just as soon as she struck the city behind the brewery. She found that the only Hurley in sight was M. J. Hurley, who denied knowing the Baroness, although he admitted being in Europe at the time the Hurley name sprang into romantic story.

The romance that led the Baroness to the United States began in France, where, as was remarked in this connection before, James became the guy who put the Hurl in Hurley. The Baroness was motoring one morning when the mist made the roadway uncertain.

Came Out of the Mist.

Out of the mist ahead of her car shot another car. There was a collision. A perfectly able-bodied man was hurled over the head of the intruding automobile, and when he picked himself from the lap of the Baroness, whither he had been catapulted, he said that he was much obliged to meet her and that he was James Hurley.

From the unexpected meeting there grew friendship. Friendship evoluted to love and then the Baroness came over the sea to marry the man who was shot into her young life in the damp misty morning that started the romantic motor ride.

When the baroness arrived some weeks ago Mr. Hurley was not in such a hurry to meet her as he was on the motor morning. He hasn't hurried any since. The Baroness says that she is sure that her fiance is waiting for her and will marry her in New York, having failed to keep the St. Louis date.

CASSIDY TELLS HOW MICHIGAN EXPOSED FRAUD

Mr. Cassidy tells you today what the progressive State of Michigan is doing to protect the public against frauds in food. It is a pat example of what the State Board of Health could do here in Massachusetts and Boston were it alive to the advanced food legislation of the day.

BY HARRY P. CASSIDY.

Just to show you what a live State official can do in the way of protecting the public from fraud, read what a Michigan official is doing.

James Helme is Dairy and Food Commissioner of Michigan. He believes he is in office with a duty to perform. He is not acting as the Massachusetts State Board of Health always acts, always looking for precedent and absolutely devoid of initiative.

The State of Michigan has become a newspaper advertiser to warn people against the practices of dishonest food dealers.

No Law Covers Fraud.

Mr. Helme found there was no law to cover the offence. He did not wait four years for a Legislature to pass laws as did the local State Board of Health.

He found a provision firm in Detroit making misleading statements to deceive the public into thinking it was buying butter when it was getting oleomargarine.

The provision firm, which calls itself "Detroit's Largest Dealers," published this attractive line in its big advertisement in one of the morning newspapers:

"Visit our butter departments, where we sell our famous Fresh Churned at 22 and 25 cents a pound."

The average reader, of course, took this to mean that the firm was disposing of good quality butter at very much under market prices.

Mr. Helme, the State Dairy and Food Commissioner, knew this was misleading.

Did he wait for some law to cover the case? No. He went after the provision firm like any modern, up-to-date official and fought it with its own weapons.

Exposed Fraud.

He bought space in an evening newspaper the very same day. He ran a display advertisement over his own signature exposing the fraud being perpetrated by the dealer.

The State's advertisement said that the casual reader would think from the line concerning "fresh churned" that the firm was selling butter at the prices quoted.

The State advertisement continued: "Such is not the case. The 'fresh churned' mentioned in this ad is oleo, and not butter, though the word oleomargarine does not appear anywhere in the advertisement. As there is no legal way at present that applies to such deceptive ads, I am compelled to resort to the advertising columns of this newspaper to protect Detroit consumers."

There is a concrete illustration of what one active State official can do to protect the public from cheats and frauds. If Michigan can do these things, why not Massachusetts, where similar ones are occurring frequently?

URGES SOCIETY FOR SUPPRESSION OF ALL MASHERS

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—"A society for the suppression of mashing would tend to make New York an ideal city for a young woman to go about in at any hour of the day," said Miss Anna Moscowitz, the young woman lawyer who caused the arrest of Archibald Koller for annoying her as she was leaving the Night Court.

"But that society," she continued, "would also have to compel women to cease wearing freakish dresses.

"The men of New York are courteous by nature."

Convict 18 Men for Smoking in Mills

Westwood Couple Crushed Under Weight of Runaway.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Alger of Westwood, who narrowly escaped death when a runaway horse leaped into their automobile, are expected to recover from their injuries. They are in the City Hospital. Mrs. Alger has a broken left leg, a broken collar bone and broken ribs. Mr. Alger suffered a fractured nose. Several contusions about the face and body and internal injuries.

As the automobile was passing Huntington avenue on River Drive, Mr. Alger caught sight of the horse owned by McCloud Brothers, Brookline.

Before Mr. Alger or his wife could escape, the horse, coming at right angles to the machine, reared on its hind legs and leaped into the air, landing feet first in the auto. The Algers were crushed beneath its weight and it was some time before they could be removed.

MAY EXHUME SCHAICK BODY IN POISON HUNT

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—Coroner H. W. Livingston has begun taking the testimony in Pelham on the information which alleged that Singleton Van Schaick, the millionaire sportsman, died under suspicious circumstances at his country home, "Near Stongue," July 13.

As soon as the evidence can be transcribed from the stenographers' notes it will be submitted to the District Attorney of West-chester County. That official announced that he would decide, without delay, whether the body of Mr. Van Schaick should be exhumed to further the search for traces of chloral poisoning.

Mrs. Joseph Jasper Ecclesine, wife of the Van Schaick social secretary, yesterday visited Lawyer Joan J. Crennan of New Rochelle. She was hardly in the office before Coroner Livingston appeared. He remained for more than two hours, summoning a stenographer and taking in full the statements made to him.

"I remember the party given just before I left with my children 'Near Stongue,'" said Mrs. Ecclesine. "As usual my husband sat at the right of Mrs. Van Schaick. They drank from the same glass. This was sometimes done simultaneously but of course with much spilling of wine.

"They had eaten ice cream from the same spoon on other occasions. Until the affair of the wine I thought it was merely a joke. Poor Singleton seemed unable to prevent the remarks that passed between my husband and his wife.

"On this particular night Singleton became drowsy after one of his drinks and fell asleep. He acted as if his drink had contained a drug. He was carried out and the house party became even more hilarious. I was disgusted and went to my babies."

MOSELEY TO PITCH FINAL CONTEST AGAINST BROWNS

BROWNS CLOSE SERIES WITH RED SOX TODAY

The St. Louis Browns conclude their series with the Red Sox at the Fenway Park this afternoon. After the Browns go away tonight, the Detroit Tigers, the last of the Western teams, come here to finish out the week.

Earl Hamilton, the star pitcher of the St. Louis team, will pitch the last game against the Carrigans. Young Mosely will surely twirl for the Red Sox, unless Manager Carrigan should decide to give Fred Anderson, his new pitcher, an opportunity to show. The chances are, however, Carrigan will hold back Anderson for a few days' limbering up and probably work him in one of the games against the Tigers.

Anderson Has Good Record.

Anderson has pitched very well for the Brockton team of the New England League this season. He has won sixteen games and lost seven. This is a very creditable record in view of the fact that that Brockton is pretty well down in the old organization.

Harry Hooper, who was relieved of his duties as leadoff batter a few weeks ago, is back in his old position. Manager Carrigan apparently has come to the conclusion that the erratic right fielder is the man best fitted for the position.

Three Men in Hooper's Place.

Just before Jake Stahl was released by the Red Sox he shifted Hooper, using Steve Yerkes as a leader and Hooper as the follow-up man. This plan did not seem to work out with success, however, as Steve, at that time, was having a bad batting slump. When Carrigan took over the reins he shoved up Engle to the top of the batting list, but Clyde only held there a few days. Jerren followed but done nothing to the line of batting that would entitle him to that position.

It seems that the change has done Janvrin a world of good. The youngster got in two safe hits in five times at the bat yesterday and acted as though he was more at home at the end of the lineup than at the top.

Another young pitcher will report to the Red Sox shortly in person of William Byers of Minnesota. He is a Southpaw and has been pitching as a semi-professional. He is now on his way here and will be given a trial immediately. Pitcher Verbout, whom the Red Sox were reported to have bought from the Portsmouth, Va., club, is a new one to President McAleer. The Sox head said he never bought such a man.

Sidelights on Sports

By A. H. C. MITCHELL

THESE be parlous times for the big league veterans, if the number of young players daily being unearthed by the scouts can be taken as a criterion. Should all the "rushers," secured in the past three weeks or so, make good simultaneously the Wagners and Lajoies now with us would be treated to a rude awakening before another baseball season had rolled around. Even those of the younger generation, the Cobbs and the Jacksons might consider themselves to be seriously threatened.

THE saving grace of the whole matter is that most of the much touted phenoms who will come up from below this Fall and next Spring will not make good. A club owner who secures one really strong player out of all his drafts and purchases in a season may consider himself very fortunate. Some of the men who will be brought up will, of course, stick; the major league ranks will have to be kept filled and the veteran whom age forces out of fast company after years of service will have to be replaced.

TIME was when a youngster brought up from leagues of lower grades generally stuck. He silently took his place in the ranks of the baseball elect and stayed there. Today the "rusher" seems to have far less chance to linger in the big show. Many reasons have been advanced to account for the change, perhaps the most reasonable being that given by Billy Hamilton, the recently appointed manager of the Haverhill club, who spotted for a couple of seasons for the Pilgrims. Billy likes to remark that most of the players are being pinched too green and are spoiled when they get into the big leagues by too much forcing.

THE whole thing seems to be caused by over-anxiety of one big league manager to beat out another. A likely looking youngster is reported in one of the scouting leagues of the country and, immediately there is a scramble to see who can get him. He may or a year or even a fortnight away from the big league form but that makes no difference. He is brought up to be scared to death, perhaps, by the speed of some seasoned big league outfielder or the benching of some big league baserunner, and he is sent back for more seasoning. Often as not he never comes up again. He has been spoiled by being brought up too early and his chance to shine in the baseball firmament is gone forever.

ALL this is very good for the owners of clubs in the smaller leagues, where gate receipts are never any too good; it is a serious question as to whether it is good for baseball as a whole. Perhaps a scheme of regulating this condition of affairs will never be hit upon, but whoever works out some such system will confer a great boon upon certain long-suffering major league club owners, and perhaps not work much injury to the smaller leagues at that.

AT the same time the policy of standing pat has little to commend it. The Red Sox, the world's champions of last season, stood pat this Spring, and are now in the second division, instead of being up there fighting with the Athletics for the lead. The Pittsburgh club, despite its much advertised expenditures, has been standing pat for too many years upon certain players. On paper the Pirates were, last Spring, the most formidable looking aggregation in the land; just now they are having their troubles in keeping in the first division. The veterans, whose past reputation made them look so formidable in the training camp, no longer have their old speed. They can no longer put their baseball knowledge to the same practical use they did formerly, and the percentage is against the club holding onto them.

Most of the present-day games are of the "close" variety, that is, games which are won by one or two runs, and the club with the speed has the edge on the slower team in the matter of getting those extra tallies when the pitchers are going well and the breaks are coming even.

THE transfer of big Larry McLean from the Cardinals to the Giants proves that Manager McGraw has lost none of his old-time liking for subduing unruly ball players. The wilder they are the better he seems to like them. He is a good "tamer," though, and it is even betting he has Larry converted into a model of deportment before the box has been on the New York team more than a fortnight. There is no question that given by Billy Hamilton, the recently appointed manager of the Haverhill club, who scouted for a couple of seasons for the Pilgrims, Billy likes to remark that most of the players are being pinched too green and are spoiled when they get into the big leagues by too much forcing.

Matty Baldwin Tells of Coast Campaign

Climate and Weight Conditions Hurt Charlestown Boy's Chances in Cross Bout.

By JACK CONWAY.

MATTY BALDWIN, who is back in Boston after a strong campaign on the Pacific Coast, where he was defeated by Leach Cross in a twenty round bout, accompanied by his manager, Eddie Murphy, called at this office today. The stout-hearted Charlestown boy is not in the least bit discouraged because he was conquered by Cross. He attributes his downfall to his "go," with the New York dentist to the climate and because he was unable to train properly for the encounter. Matty had the following to say about his trip to the Coast and his plans for the future:

"Eddie Murphy and myself left Boston on July 5, and reached the coast on July 17. That gave me only eleven days in which to train for my bout with Cross. I was anxious to get training quarters at Venice, but was informed that I could not get a permit. Consequently, I was forced to get quarters outside of Los Angeles which were not as good as those at Venice.

"When I left Boston it was on the understanding that I was to receive $2,500 for my end of the purse and that the fight was to be at 133 pounds. After we reached Los Angeles Cross backed in and held the club up for $1,000 more than he had originally agreed to fight for, and also demanded that the fight be at ringside weights.

"Eddie Murphy informed Tom McCarey that there would not be any fight unless Cross at least consented to make 133 pounds. The New Yorker refused to do this.

HAD DISPUTE WITH MANAGER.

"MURPHY then came to my and said that there would not be any fight. I became excited and told Eddie that I had not made the trip across the Continent for nothing and that I would fight Cross even if he weighed a ton.

"Murphy also got warm under the collar and declared that he would not second me. 'Well, I will fight without a second,' I asserted. I was afraid the 'Tape' on the Coast would say that I was afraid of Cross if I called off the bout.

"The day before the contest I was very ill and Murphy tried to per suade me to call off the match but I thought that I would be all right the following day. But I was not. I went on and fought Leach and Murphy was in my corner. I weighed 133 pounds when I entered the ring while Cross scaled at least 140 pounds.

"I was too weak to hold up my hands during part of the bout. I fought only in flashes. In the fourteenth round I had Cross groggy and would have beaten him badly if I had not been in such poor condition.

TO FIGHT ONLY LIGHTWEIGHTS.

I COULD have had several more bouts on the Coast but I thought that I would return home and take a rest. I was also eager to see the latest addition to the Baldwin family, a bouncing baby girl.

"I will be ready to fight in three or four weeks, but I am tired of the wishes of my manager and only fight lightweights. I am tired of battling with welterweights, and in future my opponents will have to make 133 pounds at 3 or 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

"I would like to get a date with Eddie Murphy or 'Young' Gilmore. I am also open to meet Jack Reid, provided that he can prove he is the real goods.

As for Gilbert Gallant, he had better get a reputation before he challenges me again. If he can defeat Joe Eagan I will box him, but not until then."

"PORKY"-SAM BOUT CERTAIN.

SAM LANGFORD and "Porky" Flynn are almost certain to clash at the Atlas A. A. on August 20. Joe Woodman, acting for Langford, has closed an agreement for the match with the matchmaker of the local club. As Flynn is willing to fight Sam, it looks as though the contest will surely take place. "Porky" is expected to sign for the bout within a few days.

Many Lynn "fans" are eager to see Lindgard and Flynn in action. The last named has not boxed in Boston for over two years, and in this time has engaged in many important battles. Langford would naturally be made a big favorite over Flynn, but the West End boy's friends feel confident that his skill as a boxer would enable him to hold Langford at bay for twelve rounds.

Sam and "Porky" fought when in Australia. The contest lasted fourteen rounds and was stopped by the police. They claimed that Flynn was on the verge of a knockout when they halted festivities. "Porky," however, asserts that he was outpointing Langford and that he was as strong as a young moose when the police intervened.

Woodman has hired Byron Chandler's estate at North Reading, and Langford and Ross will train there for coming matches. The estate includes 160 acres and is an excellent place for training purposes.

HERE'S A LIKELY "HOPE."

A BULKY individual, weighing about 230 pounds, dropped in at this office today. After discussing the weather he announced that his name was Clement Trevaskis. At first we thought that he was either an opera singer or a strong man in a circus and were about to direct him to the advertising department, when he informed us that he was manager of Monte Britz, a Cleveland lightweight. Britz has done considerable boxing in Philadelphia and would like to perform in Boston. As we are not making the matches for the local club, we pass this information along to Messrs McGinn, Lewis & Co. for what it is worth. Personally we would rather see Trevaskis performing in ring togs than to watch a dozen Britts, even men like the famous Jimmy, in action.

IMPORTANT BOUT FOR SMITH.

"GUNBOAT" SMITH and Jim Flynn will only do light work today as that they will be "on edge" for their ten round bout, which will take place in Madison Square Garden, New York, tomorrow night. The meeting of Smith and Flynn is the only important bout for the week.

Smith must defeat Flynn if he is to retain his position among the front ranks of the heavyweights. If the "Gunboat" administers the last thumps aired Pueblo heavyweight, he will be placed in the discard and will be forced to go to work for a living.

There is little danger, however, of Flynn winning. Jim is well on in years and has gone back during the past few years. If Smith is not in any kind of good form he should win. There is little chance of the "Gunboat" scoring a knockout as Flynn is as game a boxer as ever pulled on a padded glove and will also know enough to "cover up" and stall off the battle goes against him.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Aug. 7.—The Pilgrims are on their final lap to home territory once more. They will open up a series of games with the Pirates here today, after which they journey to Boston.

This trip has been a disastrous one for the Boston team. After getting away to an even break in Chicago, a majority of the games were dropped in the Cardinals, and then, worst of all, they were forced to taste bitter defeat three successive times at the hands of the Reds. They had hoped to get away with the final game in Cincinnati, but rain spoiled their plans.

Now the Pilgrims are due to meet the toughest proposition of this campaign. The clean-cut manner in which the Pirates subdued the onward rush of the Giants, and helped the Phillies in a small way, is sufficient proof, and the Bostons may be lucky to get away with a single contest.

But, then, they will have their manager back with them today. Stallings wired Captain Bill Rariden that he would join the team in time for today's game. His services are badly needed because since he left the team before it started on this western trip, his men have played the worst ball of the season. Stallings was at Buffalo, where his wife is ill.

"Letty" Tyler will pitch the opener for Boston, while Howard Camnitz will do likewise for the Pirates.

Pilgrims Purchase Four Cuban Stars

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—President Gaffney of the Boston National League Baseball Club has purchased the release of four Cuban players from the Long Branch Club of the New York and New Jersey League. The players are Outfielder Pedroso, Shortstop Arriagas and Pitchers Luque and Villazon.

Pedroso and Arriagas have batting records for the season above the .300 mark. Luque and Villazon are right handed pitchers.

When Cobb was a tadpole and Zim so, a fish

Men spoke of the doings of old Tommy Leach,

And the Wagners and Crawfords have passed from the scene,
Tommy Leach will be clouting them still.

But if Youth waits around for Tom Leach to cave in,
It is in for a heluva wait.

CREWS IN FINAL TRYOUTS ON EVE OF BIG REGATTA

With the arrival of the Toronto, Gotham and Atlanta R. C. crews at the Union Boat Club today, practically the full quota of visiting oarsmen will have arrived in the Hub for the National Regatta.

Last evening, after the breeze had died down, all the crews on the river had trial spins, the Detroit and Indiana octets doing their first speed work and showing splendid form. The singles now also got down to more serious work than they have heretofore, and will spend today in light work finishing off. The national executive committee will also arrive today.

Today the Philadelphia oarsmen will take a trial row over the course, which they expressed themselves as delighted with after their arrival yesterday. The visitors are getting more accustomed to the rough water which prevails on the Charles.

Yesterday's spills, which fortunately did no harm, acted as a good lesson and will serve to make the visitors more careful in their waterman-ship.

The Argonauts and the other Toronto crews, as well as the scullers from the Metropolitan clubs in New York, had been expected earlier in the week, but wires received yesterday assured their arrival some time today. As soon as they arrive they will immediately tow the water and "wear off whatever harm travel may have worked on their pasal condition."

The Boat on entries put in a busy day yesterday, all of them taking long spins on the river, in addition to taking the water under their wings on trips about the city.

Several additional tents have been put up at the Union clubhouse for the accommodation of the crowds of oarsmen who are making permanent headquarters at the scene of the races.

The cutter race may be held on Saturday instead of Friday as was originally intended.

The log booms will be put out today

Cooperstown Team Wins Polo Title

NARRAGANSETT PIER, R. I., Aug. 7.—The Cooperstown polo team won the final game of the open championship, defeating Point Judith 7 to 2½ in the play for the cup recently presented by Joseph Thomas. Excellent team work was largely responsible for Cooperstown's victory, though there were some brilliant individual performances, notably the clever stick work of Rumsey.

GERMANY READS OF A TUNNEL FROM AMERICA TO EUROPE

"Best Seller" in Berlin Is Bernhard Kellermann's "Der Tunnel," a Daring Flight of Fancy in Which Is Told How the Two Hemispheres Were Connected by an Oceanic Subway.

The Explosion and Panic in the Tunnel and the Fight for a Place on the Sleeping Train.

(Copyrighted, 1913, by International News Service.)

THE look and the tone caused Rives to gaze at his friend curiously and in silence for a few moments. So Peter the Hermit might have spoken the name of Hoo to a laggard Crusader. For the first time Rives realized what this project meant to his friend in a subjective sense. Aside from fame and wealth and worldly credit Allan's vision had become his religion. Henceforth he would measure all things on the earth and air and the waters under the earth by their attitude toward and bearing on this one purpose of his life. Everything within him and around must henceforth be subservient to one purpose. His eyes, as he fixed them on his friend and awaited his answer, burned with passionate zeal, or the light of monomania according to your leaning toward poetry or science.

Use your eyes next Sunday. Find "the tunnels," and, presto! like a green streak, your keen sight will have turned your tunnels into cash. At Paragon Park, Nantasket, Sunday.

A great architect, the man who had founded the school of beauty in America's monster buildings, Rives was both a poet and a scientist. So while his imagination drew him toward his wondrous vision, his delicately adjusted judgment urged him away from the zealot who was to drive it through.

In the end it was the artist's side of him that conquered, as Allan had known it would. But his tone was as light as ever when he spoke

"Well, I suppose you'd have me arrested and haled before a sanitary board if I refused to take an active interest in your burrowing. You're sure you want me?"

"You bet I am" was the fervent response. And they gripped hands across the table and smiled

"Now, then—what do you think you want me to do?" inquired Rives. As an architect in good standing I might design the tool sheds and dormitories for your unwashed workers, but beyond that I don't see where I fit in."

"You can do that while you're resting," chuckled Allan. "I'm not hiring you as an architect, though I shall probably want you to lay out a few cities in your lunch hour."

HIS JOB

"Then," decided Rives, "I can only suppose that you want me to bring my evening clothes and guitar and lend social charm to your construction camps"

"Not exactly that, either," smiled the other. "I merely want you to take general charge of the work on this side of the water"

"The office work?"

"No, not. I told you to forget that you were an architect. The financial campaign I will have to look out for myself, though I shall probably want your advice often enough. But what I need is the actual construction work."

Rives sat bolt upright and stared at his friend.

"My dear Mac, the heat has gone to your head," he declared piteously.

Allan's jaw set. "You won't do it?" "Old man," said Rives, affectionately, "I'd do anything the world to help you But whatever gave you the notion of putting me for that sort of a role? I haven't done any actual executive work for pretty near fifteen years. I never tackled anything outside of putting up a building. I'm not an engineer

"If you were an engineer," returned the other, slowly and distinctly, "I would never dream of putting you in charge. I am going to send engineers down to you by the carload lot to do what you tell them to do"

"If I were only an engineer he went on more strongly, "do you think this plan of mine would ever have got ten beyond a plan? Never in the world! You and I both have to an unusual extent what most men lack imagination, nerve and imagination. I know why I'm putting this through and why you're the man to help me

"Somebody has to control 50,000 men living in a big city under his rule alone. He has got to see that these men sink a twelve mile hole in the ground. There is no precedent for any stunt like this in the world. No one can tell what to do because no one has any way of knowing what is going to come up. He has got to have a quick imagination and iron nerve, and you've got both of them. Now, will you take it?"

Rives gave an embarrassed laugh

A PROMISE

"Well I don't see how I can refuse after that speech, Mac" he said. "What an orator was wasted when you went in for steel girds and similar vanities! I told you I'd stick, and I'll tackle anything you say. If I pull a loomer, it's your fault. When do I begin?"

173 "Tunnel" readers found real cash money at Paragon Park, Nantasket, last Sunday. $500 more in the dividend sharp eyes will pay there again next Sunday. It will be there—waiting for YOU!

"Right after breakfast." Allan glanced at his watch

"I have an appointment—old Wittersteiner—for 9 o'clock this evening, but I fancy it won't keep me long. Then I'll be at your disposal—for the next ten years"

"What does he want?" asked Allan, keenly

"That's what I want to find out. Probably after some inside information, and he thinks he can get it from me better than from you."

"Well, you haven't any inside information—yet. But you're going to have some before you go."

"Want me to look over some plans?"

"No. I have told you twice that you ceased to be an architect when you came down here last night Plans! Why, old man, do you know that by the time you have ripped the cover off the earth down there in Jersey every plank and bolt and rivet in that tunnel will be accounted for on blue print?"

"Hm! I can see some trouble ahead for some draughtsmen," mused Rives.

"Well, let's have it."

Allan looked at the dilettante quizzically

"You haven't asked about your pay, Jack," he remarked. Rives waved his hand.

"Never mind! I'll get enough pay in credit out of the job. With my well-known gifts for the limelight I shall soak up most of the glory that's coming to you. In the meantime, Providence has not been unkind to me, so I will have to shake you down for only a nominal salary"

"How would you like to pay yourself?" inquired Allan.

"That's what I have just been outlining to you"

"Hm! I mean—cash!"

This was said earnestly. Mutely Rives asked for details. The engineer's hand dropped on a pile of telegrams

A CLEVER SCHEME

"See these—well, these represent more millions, potentially, than either of us will ever need."

"You interest me," commented Rives with irony

"How much money can you raise—in the last do it—within the next forty eight hours"

"I don't know—four—maybe five millions"

"Would you like to bet it on a 50 to 1 shot where you have no chance to lose?"

Rives laughed "It's not sportsmanlike, but I might be dragged shrieking into it if it isn't too open a violation of the penal code"

"It's a real estate option deal."

"Hm! Proceed"

"My dear chap, hasn't it occurred to you what is going to happen around the entrances to the tunnel? In the first place, there will be at least fifty thousand workmen there. That means that within a year there will be four new cities in the world, each with a population of from two hundred thousand to a half-million, and after that the population will shoot up in hounds. My simple little plan has all been laid out. When these telegrams are received my agents will pay within the next two days nearly every cent of the twenty millions I have made out of Atlantic buying up options and taking titles where that isn't possible. I am going to own the land on which these cities have to be built!"

"Good Lord!" breathed Rives, after a pause, as if to take in the details "I should say it was a sure fifty-to-one shot!"

"Well what do you think? Do you want to get in it?"

"Want to? You couldn't keep me out. I can raise four million without changing myself too much."

"Then," said Allan quietly, picking up a pencil, "I'll extend the orders just that much."

Rives watched him in silence for a minute or two. He was thinking rapidly and clearly

"Mac," he said, solemnly, at last, "I don't think I ever before got the real idea of how big this thing is. Here we are going to stake a few hundred millions out of it and never get nearer than the outskirts of the real profits. It—it comes pretty near being TOO big' I'm thinking about the Tower of Babel, and—Mac, it almost scares me"

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

There's money in tunnels! Don't believe it? Then go to Paragon Park, Nantasket, next Sunday. $500 will be there waiting for YOU. Details and announcement in today's AMERICAN.

"SEEING IS BELIEVING"—173 saw "the tunnels" at Paragon Park, Nantasket, last Sunday. Just ask them if they don't believe there's "money in tunnels." Again next Sunday—same place—same time—same amount—$500. Why not join the search? It's worth it! Details in today's AMERICAN.

A Clever Man's Choice in Women

By WINIFRED BLACK

"I AM going to marry a beautiful woman," said the clever man, "and a good woman, and I don't care whether she can spell c-a-t cat, or d-o-g dog or not.

"The stupider she is the better; women are so comfy when they are stupid—they are like nice soft cushions, always so pretty to see and so nice to lean against.

"I'm tired of clever people, tired of bright women, tired of intelligent companionship. I want to be comforted; I don't want to be stimulated.

"Marry now? No; not just quite yet. I'm not ready just now, but in a few years, when I'm through with things I'll marry—somebody pretty, somebody dull, somebody sweet tempered, and then I shall have a family—tall sons and pretty daughters—clever boys and good girls—and I shall sit back and watch them grow up, and tell my wife what to do, and my sons and I will have a good time laughing at the pretty sisters and the kind, sweet-tempered mother, and life will be just as it should be."

And the clever man did what so few clever men ever do—he kept his word.

He knew clever women and pretty women and good women, and rich women and poor women and young women, and middle-aged women and old women, and women as slim as willows and women who thought of themselves as "Junoesques."

Five years ago he married, just as he said he would, a beautiful, amiable fool. Yesterday I saw the clever man and his beautiful wife. There were two children—a very ugly, very lively, very interesting, very clever little girl, with her father's high forehead and her father's stubborn mouth, and her father's awkward gait. And there was a very handsome, very dull, very slow-witted, very timid little boy, with his mother's weak mouth, and his mother's almost silly smile.

And the clever man was madly in love with his ugly daughter, and was doing his best to spoil her, and the stupid woman was desperately devoted to her stupid son, and they were all four very happy, much to the disgust of several very much interested people who had been hoping all along that the clever man would see what a mistake he had made, and would be very, very miserable.

All of which goes to show what fun it must be to be a novelist and have people happy when they ought to be instead of when they are.

The man's theories about women? They haven't changed a particle. "I'm glad my daughter is clever," says the clever man. "I don't have to marry her." Wouldn't you like to shake him?

The Wife Who Spends Her Husband's Money

By DOROTHY DIX

WHEN a young man asks a girl's hand in marriage the first question that her father puts to him is, "Can you support my daughter in comfort?"

No kind and thoughtful parent, however, ever takes the trouble to ask a prospective bride, "Can you spend wisely and judiciously my son's hard-earned money?"

Yet the one thing is just as important as the other, and the happiness and success of any marriage depends just as surely on the wife's ability to get the full purchasing power out of a dollar as it does upon the husband's ability to make that dollar. The no'er-do-well of a man does not more surely bring a family to want and poverty than the thriftless and wasteful woman does.

There is a homely old proverb that says that a woman can throw more out of the back door with a teaspoon than a man can put in at the front door with a shovel. And it's true. No man, unless he is a financial wizard, can make any headway against the extravagance of a wife. It is his sacrifice's discretion as a spender that settles the average man's fate for him, and determines whether he is to sit on a bookkeeper's stool or stand behind the counter the balance of his life, or whether he is going to be well to do and prosperous or poor in his middle-aged.

When you see the young wife of a man on a moderate salary always dressed up in the very latest cut in fashion, when you meet her at matinees every week and watch her having tea at a smart hotel afterwards, when you encounter her in the butcher shop negligently ordering sweetbreads and squabs, you don't have to go to an old fortune-teller to forecast the future of her husband and herself.

You can do that for yourself. You can see a stoop-shouldered man growing more and more discouraged as the years go by, and he has nothing to show for his labor except a mountain of receipted bills, and at the end of it all can see a man dead from overwork or thrown out of his job into hopeless poverty into which he sinks.

YOU CAN FORECAST

On the other hand, when you see the wife of a poor young man who does her own housework, and makes her own frocks and, who buys the cheap cuts of meat at the butcher shop and is purchasing wisely having the bones and the trimmings sent home, you are equally able to forecast the future for her and her husband. And you see diamonds and motor cars festooning her horizon along about the time she is fifty.

There is nothing new in these statements. Everybody has seen hundreds of such cases. Everybody has recite to you dozens of instances of their personal knowledge of men who have been ruined by their wives' extravagance or made by their wives' thrift. Every mother and father pray that their own son will get a wife who has the saving bank habit instead of the bargain counter habit, yet nobody raises a finger to prevent a catastrophe that threatens every man who gets married and every family that is started.

When a woman is wasteful and extravagant and throws her husband's good money away we blame her, and say all the hard things about her that we can think of. It's cruel injustice. It isn't her fault. It's the fault of the idiotic way in which we bring girls up.

We don't teach them the value of money. We don't teach them how to spend it, and to expect them to make a wise use of it is as unreasonable as to expect a land lubber to know how to pilot a ship.

NO EXPERIENCE

The average girl, until she gets married, has never had the spending of a dollar. Her father has paid her bills, and her mother has decided what she could buy. A little change for street car and soda water is about all the money that has ever tingled in her purse. She has never had any fixed allowance for her clothes and personal expenses, and so has never realized that if she paid too much for a hat she would have to do without a dress, and that you can't spend your money and have it, too. Parents are so afraid that their daughters will waste their money that they let the girl learn how to spend on her husband's earnings, which is pretty hard on Friend Husband.

It isn't the girl's fault that she doesn't know how to spend her husband's money wisely. It's the fault of her parents who have not taught her one of the most important lessons in life. That this is true is abundantly proven by the fact that women who have earned their own living before they were married, and who have thus learned how to handle money, are almost invariably economical and thrifty managers and helps to their husbands.

There is no greater injustice in the world than the way women are treated about money. A woman, without money is the most forlorn and piteous creature on earth. She is in a thousand times worse plight, and more danger, than a man is under similar circumstances, yet fathers do not concern themselves to try to protect their daughters against such a fate.

Boys are given money of their own when they are little fellows in order that they may learn to handle it, but the little girl is left to find out this important piece of knowledge the best way she can. A boy is fitted for some occupation whereby he may support himself in comfort. A girl's living is left to chance. She isn't taught any way by which she can keep herself out of the poorhouse if she doesn't marry, or if her husband should die and leave her penniless.

A rich man leaves his daughter a fortune, but he has not taught her one thing about how to take care of it, and she is left to the mercy of executors and lawyers, and she doesn't even know enough to keep herself from being swindled.

Perhaps some day men will realize that the only way to protect themselves is to teach women how to handle money by giving them a definite sum for their own, instead of making them do the impossible act for every cent they get. Then we shall hear less about extravagant wives. It's ignorance, not wickedness, that makes women waste money.

HIS course was toward the city. He took it direct, getting on the elevated train at One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street and getting off again at Twenty-third. Why Twenty-third? Was it not late enough for him to go home? He evidently did not think so. Without hesitation and with a certain determination of manner, he went immediately to the C—— Hotel.

Let us follow him.

"Well, I suppose the wedding has come off."

These were his words to the clerk who was still at his desk in the office.

The clerk looked at him and laughed. "No," was his quick rejoinder, "it didn't. The bride absconded."

"What is that?

Mr. Gryce's tone was quite sharp. His face reassumed its old expression.

"She ran off; didn't wait for the clergyman; afraid to risk herself with such a slow-looking customer as Molesworth, I suppose. I can't say I blame her."

"Hmmph! You interest me. And at what hour was this; how soon after we left?"

"In a few minutes, I should say; for you had not been gone more than half an hour when the expectant bridegroom came with the Rev. ——. Pease at his heels, and she was not here then, nor had been some little time."

"Who saw her go out?"

"The hall boy."

"No one else?"

"I think not."

"Didn't she leave any word behind her?"

"Yes, a note; it was lying on the table in her room. Molesworth got it.

"The door then was open?"

"It was unlocked."

"Curious. Thee seems to be some difficulty in the way of wedlock tonight. I have just come from a wedding and the bride was three-quarters or more an hour late. But Molesworth, as you call him—how did he take it?"

"That's hard telling; he looked grim enough, but then he was none too cheerful looking before. Anything but a bridegroom in appearance at any time. But, then, it was rather hard lines for him. 'Twould make any man angry. Mr. Pease on hand and no bride! I declare, I felt cheap myself; and the chambermaid, I believe, shed tears, grieving over the loss of the good fee she expected, I suppose."

"Yes, it's quite thrilling, quite romantic," quoth Mr. Gryce, enthusiastically. Then, in quieter tones, remarked: "You were all in the room, then"

"No, I don't know anything about it till Dr. Molesworth came down, and giving me the price of the room, remarked that there would be no wedding at present, the young lady having preferred to wait till she could have her friends about her."

"Ah!" ejaculated Mr. Gryce.

"Neat, wasn't it?" remarked the clerk. "But he is no fool, and though I knew on the spot that she had run away for good, I couldn't help giving him credit for coolness. But it was all in his words; his look was terrible."

Mr. Gryce's eyes fixed themselves on the small lamp used to light cigars.

"It was imagine it," said he.

"But he wasn't tragic; not a bit of it," continued the clerk. "Not even when he took out the note he had evidently received from the girl, and burned it in the flame of that jet."

"Oh! he burned it, did he?"

"Down to the very end."

"And then went away?"

"Directly."

"Well, this has been a delightful evening!" commented Mr. Gryce; and he lounged away a few more minutes in the office, then went out and entering a drug store near by, searched for an address in the directory.

"I cannot sleep; why, then, not amuse myself?" his look seemed to say, as, glancing up at the clock, he passed again into the street and betook himself westward.

Certainly one does not run across such a combination every day, and when one is a detective, why not enjoy now and then the advantages of his position?

Mr. Gryce went up the steps of a handsome brick building to which was attached a doctor's sign.

A middle-aged woman of neat enough appearance, answered his ring, after a short delay.

"Is Dr. Doctor in?" he asked.

She shook her head, and glancing at a slate that hung on one of the pegs of the old-fashioned hallrack, declared:

"He won't be home before tomorrow."

"And I am so ill," murmured the detective, with an air of great weakness. He had read her character at a glance.

"You?" she exclaimed.

"And I have come so far," he went on. "I thought surely I should see him tonight, if I came late enough. I know he is going to be married soon, but——"

"Married?" The interruption was full of surprise and incredulity. "Married! Dr. Molesworth? I guess you are mistaken."

"Oh, no," the old gentleman persisted, assuming with every instant a look of greater distress.

"I had it from one who knows him intimately. He is going to be married, but sensible girls don't keep their lovers out too late, and I thought I might find him in. I wish I had, for when I have these turns nothing but opium will help me, and the drug clerks won't give it to me without a doctor's prescription. I must go on."

But the old lady's sympathy as well as curiosity had been aroused. She was a widow and a boarding-house keeper, but she had a heart and was not afraid of showing it.

THE LANDLADY

She therefore stopped him as he hobbled toward the door, and, showing him the way into the parlor, asked him to sit down by the fire and warm himself a moment before going out.

"I am sitting up," she explained, "because there are still four or five of my young men out, and as I do not give night-keys to anyone but the doctor, I have to sit up, or ask some of my hard-working girls to do so. It is dreary waiting sometimes, but, on the whole, they are considerate, and I don't complain."

Then as she saw, or thought she saw, the old gentleman's face grow brighter in the really genial glow of the good hard-coal fire before them, she asked in a hospitable tone, if he had ever heard whom the doctor was going to marry.

He shook his grey locks indifferently, picked out with his glance a coal in the fireplace, and began to study it intently.

"I never paid it any attention," said he. "I am getting too old to busy myself much about such matters; and girls are all the same to me, unless it be one girl," he added, with a half-senile, half-pathetic smile, taking from his pocket as he did so a photograph which he looked at fondly.

"Your daughter?" inquired the old lady.

"My granddaughter," he replied, with enthusiasm.

She leaned over as women will at the sight of any picture in the hand of another, and quietly looked at it.

"Good heavens," she exclaimed, "it is Mildred Farley."

"Mildred Farley," he repeated, in mild surprise. "I never heard that name. This is Joanna Hinddesombe."

"Let me see it," she cried, and Mr. Gryce, greatly pleased at the success of his trick, handed her the picture of Genevieve Grownyx, satisfied that if this good woman continued to find it like the Mildred Farley she had mentioned, he should find that Mildred Farley was the name of the young woman he had himself first taken for the original of this picture, and in whose fate despite his reason and his years he had found himself so much interested that he had come here at this late hour of the night to learn her name, and if possible her dwelling place.

Health and Beauty Helps

BY MRS. MAE MARTYN

Mary B.: I want you to try the following recipe to whiten, soften and beautify the skin of your face and neck. It is one which you will find really helpful to the hands and arms. Though inexpensive, it is the very best I have tried. Dissolve 4 ounces of spermaz in ½ pint witch hazel, or bay water, then add 2 ounces of glycerine. This will clear and soften your skin quickly, while removing tan, sunburn, freckles and other blemishes.

Cora: Objectionable fuzzy or hairy growths on the chin should be removed if you intend to wear a thick veil and apply to hairy surface for 2 or 3 minutes, then rub off, with the skin and every trace of hair is gone. Excepting in very advanced cases, one application of delatone is sufficient. No harm will result, but be sure you get delatone.

C. H. H.: The redness and dullness of your eyes, as well as the bunchy appearance of which you complain can be readily cured for practically nothing. Get at the cause of excess, dissolve it in a pint of water and put a few drops in each eye daily. This is a canteel tonic, which will both soothe and strengthen while toning up the nerves and beautifies the "windows of your soul," making them stronger and more attractive.

A. M. F.: You should try this shampoo, which I always use because it keeps the hair lustrous and fluffy and is cheap and convenient. You can make it by dissolving a teaspoonful of canthrex in a cup of hot water. Use this in the usual way when you rinse the hair thoroughly several times after you have shampooed it well. This shampoo also benefits the roots of the hair, keeps the scalp perfectly clear of dandruff and has an invigorating effect.

A. J. B.: Your trouble with itching scalp and loss of hair can be overcome with this excellent quinine hair tonic, which I always make up here at home. Get an ounce of quinoin from your druggist and dissolve it in a half pint of alcohol, to which solution add one half pint of cold water. Once or twice a week rub this into the scalp with the tips of your fingers. This is the tonic I have found most helpful among the many which have come to my attention. It is refreshing and effective, with no unpleasant features. Also try shaving the hair or making it appear stringy.

C. J. H.: You say you are all fagged out. Let me give you a recipe which will brace you up and restore the clearness to your complexion and remove the yellow, unhealthy appearance of the skin and neck. Dissolve one ounce of sal carbonate in a half cup sugar in one-half pint of alcohol and add hot water to make a full quart. Take a tablespoonful before each meal and you will soon notice a decided improvement of appearance and general health. If you are very much run down you should find it quickly removes them by making better circulation.

P. R.: No, fat is hardly an aid to attractiveness, but you have no excuse for being too stout. Get a half pint or four ounces of parnotis from your druggist and dissolve it in two pints of hot water. Take a tablespoonful before each meal and, in a short time, without dieting or exercise, you will be surprised to lose flesh. Remember, a persistent effort is necessary to win in this as in all else.

Dot: Your wrinkles, especially in the forehead, are due to nervousness and can be removed by the following facial remedy for them results in treating the skin externally with a cream of almozoin cream jelly, easily made at home. This is made by pouring 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine in ½ pint water, then when it is thus dissolved, 1 ounce almozoin. Massaging with this simple vegetable cream jelly will quickly fill the skin of lines, blackheads and wrinkles and when used for flabby muscles and hollows will make the flesh firm and smooth. The results are very pleasing when used as a night mask.

LATEST FROM TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

Stocks opened stronger and in especial demand in New York where reports that peace in the Balkans was "assured" had a helpful influence. Copper benefited by the advance in London warrants and the report there is metal buying on a large scale in Europe.

At the end of the first hour here, Calumet & Arizona, Butte & Superior, North Butte, American Zinc, Granby and Copper Range were among leaders to show fractional gains, while Calumet & Hecla was a point lower.

Union Pacific in New York had not held all its earlier advantage, but was up ½. Among leaders Canadian Pacific was about the only weak issue. It was off by a fraction. Stocks which had made gains included Northern Pacific, Southern Pacific, Reading, Lehigh Valley, Steel, American Can, Amalgamated and Erie.

Aggressive Buying in New York.

There was aggressive buying in New York around the opening, and during the first fifteen minutes gains were the rule. Union Pacific was strong and there was demand for Southern Pacific certificates. Wabash preferred made a gain in a point. Interest also centered on the reorganization of the Wabash system.

Texas Co. was prominent, expanding 2 to 115. Early market strength was attributed to the news that Balkan states have signed another peace protocol. Foreign stocks were firm in London, although narrow in movement. The Bank of England statement was very favorable and consols were buoyant.

Among early gains in New York were Amalgamated, ¾; Steel common, ¼; Western Maryland, ½; Utah Copper, ¾; Union Pacific, ¾; Southern Railway, ¾; Reading, ¾; Pennsylvania, ¼; New Haven, ¼; Missouri Pacific, ⅝; "Katy," ⅝; American Can and Foundry, ¼; Great Northern preferred, ¼; Erie, ¼, and Chino Copper, ⅝.

Canadian Pacific shaded to, while America Sugar lost the same amount. At the end of half an hour Union Pacific was up 1 point. The privilege allowed for subscription of Union Pacific close today, but the stock exchange ruled that sales of the issue during the morning would not be ex-rights, but that a due bill would be given for rights when the company did not announce the price at which Southern Pacific certificates of interests would be offered.

The curb was strong.

Quick Action on Currency.

The legislative situation in such at Washington that quick action is looked for on the currency bill, and it is expected that it will pass the House by September 1, and President Wilson hopes to see it enacted without being necessary for Congress to prolong the present session into the Autumn. A number of Republican senators, however, have said that if the bill is to pass the administration will have "to wait until the snow flies." There is more opposition to it in the Senate than in the House, where it is believed that the Democrats will speedily give it caucus approval. Judging from what the Senate did in regard to the tariff, the administration will have no more trouble in the upper than in the lower branch of Congress in enacting currency reform.

Chairman Underwood is Pleased.

Chairman Underwood of the Ways and Means Committee, leader of the House Democrats, is pleased with the currency measure as it stands and said about it:

"Personally I believe the bill is good one and its effects will be beneficial to the country. Approval of its provisions are coming from the people in addition. Opposition from the bankers in the financial centres was to be expected. For years they have been getting money for their reserves at 2 per cent, and earning upon this money about 6 per cent interest.

I cannot criticise them for their protest.

Democratic opposition to the Glass-Owen bill will be slight, and we are sure to draw to the support of the bill a number of Republican votes. The vote for the bill in the House will be very large.

What N. Y. Bankers Think.

New York bankers regard the amendments to the currency bill permitting national banks to act as trustees under mortgages and to receive savings deposits as a "sop" to gain the support of country institutions.

"National bank officers said they did not want to act as trustees under mortgages because it was not profitable enough and trust company officials said they did not believe national banks would go in for the business from this source because it was an innovation on the latter and not sufficiently conservative. For this reason, too trust companies do not believe they will lose any business or will have to compete with the national banks.

"No opposition to this amendment is expected from trust companies in this city. It was pointed out, however, in some States trust companies are not permitted to receive deposits, and there would probably be opposition to the amendment from these sources because they might lose part of what little business they now transact."

Commercial Bills in More Demand.

There is more demand for commercial paper, and many observers of the money market credit the improvement to the plan of the Secretary of the Treasury to deposit from $25,000,000 to $50,000,000 of government cash in national banks in the West and South where rates there are still high, and it is said that there is little discounting under 6 per cent, and much of it is on a 7 per cent basis.

When New York bankers discussed Secretary McAdoo's plan for financing crop movements they said that they were afraid it would promote hoarding operation and a tendency towards inflation in general before the country was ready for it. This was scoffed at by West and South, where it was asserted that all Wall Street was seeking was to keep money rates as high as possible to facilitate contraction as long as possible.

It is interesting in this connection to quote what President George M. Reynolds of the Continental and Commercial Bank of Chicago says about the situation for it voices the feeling in the West, where confidence obtains more widely than in the East.

"The monetary situation," he said, "has been easing constantly during the past two weeks, and bankers and business interests display a better spirit. They feel assured that there will not be a panic. A large demand for money is expected during the Autumn and rates will be stiff, but this is not an unusual condition for the season."

London Copper Quotations.

The London copper warrants market opened strong, spot and futures advancing 15s. each.

The Boston News Bureau prints a cablegram from London stating "Consumers are buying electrolytic in large lots, with leading producers consummating transactions at £76 10s. to £71 5s. (25¾ to 15¾c), the latter an average of ¼c per pound over quotations at which previous business was done. Amalgamated and American Smelting agencies quote £71 10s. for September, and £71 15s. for October delivery. Very little metal on hand for immediate delivery."

Financial News in Brief.

The Bank of England's minimum rate of discount remained unchanged today at 4½ per cent. The proportion of the bank's reserve to liabilities is now 53.90 per cent, against 53.80 per cent. last week, and compares with a decline from 55.90 to 48¾ per cent. in the corresponding week last year. The Bank of Bengal has raised its discount rate from 3 to 4 per cent.

July shipments of anthracite totalled 4,487,852 tons compared with 6,285,153 a year ago.

During July F. W. Woolworth Co. sales increased at a rate equalling 9.46 per cent.

For June, New York, Ontario & Western gross increased $18,483 and the surplus $9,406. For the fiscal year the gain in gross was $520,406 and the surplus increased $737,994.

Orders received for structural steel within a week total about 10,000 tons.

For the last fiscal year, Lehigh Valley's net income available for dividends increased $1,048,808.

Pick up $87,000 Lost on Sidewalk in New York City

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—R. G. and A. G. Dale, brothers, business men in the banking district, picked up a wallet containing $87,000, mostly in negotiable railroad and mining securities. The stocks have been traced to the owners. It is believed a bank messenger dropped the wallet.

RAIN CHECKS FOREST FIRES ON CAPE COD

HYANNIS, Aug. 7.—Nature today, by a few hours rainfall, effectively stopped the onrushing forest fires, where more than 1,000 men, after days of constant effort, faced failure.

There was little wind, and every bit of the forty square miles affected, by the fire was inundated. The flames that had been mounting higher and higher as they surged along, gradually subsided.

The fire still smoulders between South Yarmouth and Yarmouth Depot. Two hundred of the fire fighters, despite the fact they have not ceased their vigil of force and the year ending June 30, as for three thirty-six hours, are still on watch.

Lays Girl's Death to Fraternities

Kansas City School Head Says Joy Rides, Too, Help in Downfall.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 7.—The death of Mete Zook, an eighteen-year-old high school student, after a criminal operation resulting in the arrest of two physicians and the bringing out of names of a dozen high school boys as being implicated, is attributed to the use of automobiles by the students and their fraternities, by I. I. Cammack, superintendent of schools.

Mr. Cammack said there was a rule against fraternities in the high schools. He stated, however, that there was no rule against boys coming to school in automobiles. This practice, he said, upon which had resulted disastrously in many cases, when the boys took girls out riding.

Bill to Increase Gold in Reserve

Senator Owen's Measure Would Retire 2 Per Cent. Bonds.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—A bill providing for increasing the gold reserve in the redemption division of the Treasury, retiring the 2 per cent. bonds and unifying the currency issues of the United States, was introduced in the Senate today by Senator Owen of Oklahoma, chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee.

LARGEST CIRCULATION IN NEW ENGLAND, DAILY AND SUNDAY

The State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration Should Have Granted the Request of the Employes of Governor Foss for an Open Hearing

The State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration should have granted the request of the employes of Governor Foss to hold an OPEN HEARING on their grievances.

This board is without mandatory powers. Its mission and authority is to exercise MORAL SUASION on the parties to these unhappy convulsions and industrial disputes called strikes.

The most powerful agent of moral suasion today is PUBLICITY.

The power of PUBLIC SYMPATHY will determine the issue in most strikes. No body of employes ever yet won a strike when public sympathy was against them. Few employers have held out long after public sympathy became manifestly against them.

A PUBLIC HEARING is the best means of formulating and crystalizing public opinion and of permitting both sides in the dispute to see themselves as others see them.

If the men are wrong and have no real grievances, it would quickly be ascertained at a public hearing and immediately their agitation would subside or become insignificant.

If it should appear that Governor Foss is mistaken in his contention that he is giving as good or better conditions than any of his competitors, that, too, could be MADE TO APPEAR at a public hearing.

The Governor is an extremely obstinate man, but he is a very able man—able enough to realize that he must be wrong, if everybody BELIEVED him to be wrong after knowing all the facts.

Today the Governor believes, and he is probably right in thinking, that this strike was FOMENTED by men desiring to deposit him in a political cavity. This aroused his fighting blood, and it takes some time to overcome the inertia in a man of the Governor's temperament.

But even if the strike WAS started by the Governor's political enemies, his employes have been made the victims of the political conspiracy equally with the Governor. It is apparent that the men are not now in any mood to carry on a political feud. They want peace, WITH HONOR.

Since the Governor took the leadership of the Democratic party and became Governor of this Commonwealth, more legislation has been obtained to AMELIORATE THE CONDITION of the workingman in this State than in any preceding administration. He would not voluntarily anti-climax this fine record by undue obstinacy, if it became evident to him that the public believed him to be wrong. And no one can say where the right and where the wrong lies until a public hearing has been held.

Poor Old England, Her Feelings Are Hurt

For a Big Country, with Big Men, She Does Some Small Things

Copyright, 1913, by the Star Company.

We shall soon have a big Panama Exposition in California. More than twenty-five of the world's nations have accepted the invitation to show at that Exposition what they are doing and what they have accomplished since the last great Exposition.

But England, our respected stepmother across the water, sends word that she will keep her little dolls and toys at home and will NOT exhibit.

Her feelings are hurt, if you please, because we would not arbitrate with Great Britain the question of her right to use IN HER OWN WAY the Panama Canal, which we built WITH OUR OWN MONEY.

We didn't ask Great Britain to arbitrate with us regulations concerning the Manchester Canal, which she built.

We don't ask her to arbitrate her right to keep a lot of guns perched on the Rock of Gibraltar, thus controlling the Mediterranean shores. We ought to question that right, by the way, and some day probably we'll do away with it. But we are very nice about it just NOW.

Poor old England, it seems as though we were always destined to hurt her feelings. We had to give her a thrashing in 1776.

In 1812 she had to have another.

Now, Britannia's classical nose is out of joint because the United States has been so unreasonable as to decide that the United States SHIPS can go through a canal built with United States MONEY on terms different from the terms accorded to the ships of England and all the rest of the world.

Well, dear old Lady Albion, stay HOME, with your toys and your exhibits if you must. We should like to have had you come over, with your cocoa and your Manchester hardware, your automobiles, your exquisitely funny so-called English accent and all the rest of it.

But we always have an English exhibit in America, without any special contribution to the Exposition in California.

If we wanted to be hard-hearted and cruel (which Providence forbid!) we could set apart a little spot for England at the Exposition ANYHOW, and have a nice little English exhibit of our own, including:

The polo cup that England, with the pick of her whole army of India and the British Islands, can't seem to get—although only a few score of American boys play polo regularly and supply our ponies.

And we might have the yachting cup, that England, so-called ruler of the waves, has been obliged to leave over here for a considerable period.

We could have quite a string of cups representing the various "English sports," in which England always is second, when she isn't third, fourth, fifth or worse.

We don't want to be cruel, however. We shan't have any English exhibition since England doesn't want it.

The whole country, the entire United States, is as much of an English exhibition as we want.

Here we show what a country does when England no longer controls it.

Here we show by contrast with countries that England rules what it means to escape from English rule and to GOVERN YOURSELF.

In California, and on every inch of soil from New England to California, there is an exhibition of the results obtained by the descendants of the men that knew enough to get rid of England's rule a good many years ago.

But, poor old stepmother, let us not speak unkindly of her.

Her feelings are hurt. Let us rather wipe her tears, and while telling her firmly that she cannot be permitted to boss the Panama Canal or other things American, and reminding her gently that 1776 was some time ago, let us be as kind to her as we know how.

There is no fun being an Anglo-Saxon old lady, a little stiff in the joints, and to see the young folks among nations going ahead and leaving you.

One Woman's Story

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

Chapter XIV.

MARY DANFORTH awoke early on the morning of her graduation day. She lifted her watch from the table at the head of her bed and glanced at it sleepily, noting with satisfaction that it still lacked more than an hour to breakfast time.

She lay half awake and let happy thoughts drift through her mind—light, girlish thoughts of the beauty of her graduation gown; affectionate thoughts of her father, speeding home from a business trip in the far West to be with his daughter on this important day; tender, timid thoughts of Gordon Craig.

In a letter written a week ago her lover had repeated his assurance that he would see her graduated. This epistle had reached her only the day before yesterday, and since then she had heard nothing from him, yet she was sure that he would be true to his word. She smiled now as she lay in her darkened room, a smile that was full of pure joy. She knew that Craig would have a question to ask when they met, and she also knew what her answer would be. She had no doubt now that she loved him dearly and was proud and happy in her love. The smile faded slowly from her lips, and she slept again.

Her mother's gentle knock on the door awakened her a half-hour later.

"It's time to get up, girlie!" she announced, entering the room. "Breakfast will be ready soon and father has telephoned from the Grand Central to say that he will be up to eat it with us, as his train is just in. So try to be ready when he comes."

She kissed Mary as she had done each morning since the girl's birth, then hurried away in household tasks intent.

The trio had a happy breakfast together in the sunlit dining room. Mr. Danforth, haggard and pale—"from a sleepless night on the cars," as he explained—was once more at the head of the table, cheery and happy in spite of his evident weariness.

The morning meal over, he pushed his chair back from the table and, drawing Mary down upon his knees, questioned her with affection and interest about her plans for the day. He did not mention Craig's name. An unusual reticence had kept the Texan from his conversation ever since the young man had returned home, and when Mary had mentioned with studied indifference the fact that "Mr. Craig might possibly happen to be in New York on Commencement Day," her father let the statement pass without comment.

After a few minutes' chat this morning he declared that he must go to his office for a part of the day. At the front door he paused and came back to the dining room to kiss Mary, although he had already bade her an affectionate goodby.

"This is just to kiss my little girl once more," he explained, patting her cheek fondly. "She will be a grownup lady when I see her again."

It was late in the afternoon that Mary left the house to go down to her school. Her class were to have an early farewell supper in the gymnasium and would go directly from that to their graduation exercises.

At eight o'clock she and the rest of her class took their places in the great school auditorium, which was already crowded. Mary looked vainly among the sea of faces for the three persons who made her small world. Of course, her parents were here, she mused, although she could not discern them—but was Craig here, too? The white-haired principal arose to speak, and a hush fell on the house. Suddenly Mary knew that her lover had come. She felt his eyes upon her, and, looking up, saw him in the gallery above her. Their glances met and he smiled, but the girl blushed hotly and dropped her eyes. Her heart throbbed wildly. She had been eager to see him, but now she wished to evade his steady gaze and hide herself, yet she was happy to be in his presence.

Those who knew her said Mary Danforth had never looked sweeter and fairer than when she rose at the calling of her name and went forward to receive her diploma. She did not think of the thousands of glances resting upon her, but only of the look of the man she loved. She longed to lift her eyes and gaze into his face, but she could not. Through the valedictory she sat silent, unhearing, her eyes upon her diploma and the mass of flowers which had been handed her. She knew some of them were sent by Craig, the rest by her parents.

At last she became aware that it was all over, that people were rising and that everybody about her was talking. A gray-haired, sweet-faced teacher accosted her.

"May I speak to you a moment, dear child?" she said quietly. "Come with me."

Puzzled and vaguely alarmed the girl obeyed the older woman's bidding and followed her into a small anteroom adjoining the auditorium. As Mary noted the woman's grave demeanor a dread clutched at her heart, and she held her breath to listen.

"I have bad news for you," said her teacher simply. "You must go right home to your mother. She has sent for you. Your father"——

She paused, and the girl clasped her hands in an agony of fear.

"Oh, what is it?" she gasped. "Tell me quick! Is he hurt, or ill, or"——

Her voice failed her suddenly, for Gordon Craig stood beside her. She had not seen him enter, and he took her trembling hands in his firm grasp.

"Dear," he said quickly, but softly, while his body shielded her from the glances of persons passing the door, "you father will never be hurt or ill again. Be brave, dear. He died an hour ago."

Knowledge--Time Devoted to the Study of the Lives of Famous Personages, Great Deeds and Epoch-Making Periods in the World's History Broadens the Mind and Develops an Education Beyond Value

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

"YOU say to give up all study of history would be to some of us the keenest deprivation and it would rob travel of its most subtle pleasure, and to give up contemplation of old works of art would be crucifixion.

"Now, let me see. Because the wheelbarrow was the first invention, or the means of transportation to a great extent, would you travel in it today, or would you rather move in an auto or electric car or railway if you had to go somewhere far off? The libraries are already stocked with trash, and if anyone wants to go there and sit and waste his life away on some old history he can do so—no one will stop him. But we will an ecome greater when we learn not to bother so much about the past, but the future. READER."

No time is wasted which is used in opening up the mental realm to a larger field of knowledge of the human race, and in sowing the soil with information about great lives, remarkable eras and wonderful deeds.

Life Story of Joan of Arc a Subject Worth Pondering On

No one can read the story of Joan of Arc without becoming reverent toward the Invisible Realms and full of awe at the thought of the unfathomed depths which lie in human souls. That an ignorant peasant girl of seventeen could become a great war general and free her country is a subject worth pondering on, and "Reader" could spend his time to no better advantage than to read Mark Twain's story of Joan of Arc, even though she lived five hundred years ago.

There is no education more broadening to the mind than travel and contact with various nations and races. But travel loses two-thirds of its value and pleasure if the traveler does not know history.

There was a woman who spent a fortune in touring the world and stopping at expensive hotels and wearing elaborate gowns purchased in various capitals of the earth.

She spoke of Rome as a terribly dull place, from which she fled after a few days of boredom.

"Why, you could not buy a decent costume there," she said, "and even the tailors and dressmakers did not know what was up to date in Paris."

All the wonderful epoch-making history of that marvelous city was a sealed book to her. And all its glorious art was lost upon her fashion blinded eyes.

Any one who will read Watson's History of France, Gibbons or Carlisle, or any of the great historians will rise from the reading with new aspirations for the world as it is today and new hopes for the race.

There is no doubt in the writer's mind that America is to be the home of the greatest school of art the world has ever known.

The foundation of it is already begun, and after a few generations the geniuses will be born who shall make it illustrious.

But this great Art Birth will result from the study which has been given for half a century to the art of the Old World.

It Is Wise, Indeed, Not to Bother Regretting the Past

It is wise, indeed, not to "bother about the past" by regretting it or by a pessimistic idea that all greatness existed in the past and that the future has nothing better to offer us. But it would be a world-wide calamity to shut out from human minds the knowledge of what has been, and to direct it only toward what is to be.

There is inspiration in knowing what great souls have done in ages gone, in seeing what they have achieved, and reading what they have written.

And in understanding through what difficulties they toiled and over what obstacles they climbed.

Hours spent in gaining such information are tenfold more beneficial to the receptive mind than hours spent in vain self boasting or self satisfaction.

A True Futurist Is He Who Knows All About the Past

The true "Futurist" is he who knows all about the past; who reverences its greatness, pities its weaknesses and respects its achievements, and then sets forth to make a future greater in every way than any past has ever been.

And such a future will come in time to America.

It will give us, after its season of mere commercialism and materialism has passed, the greatest art, music and literature the world has known.

And the greatest altruism.

THE DOC'S RETURN

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

LET Trotter & Tango, that world-renowned team
Whose voddyville act was one long, refined scream,
Quit shaking their kale at the poor passers-by,
And take off their lids to a Regular Guy.
Let Memaloose Mike, with his fleet of trained seals,
Back off with his seven new automobiles.
Let all the Profession prepare for a shock,
That will knock them a twister—for here comes the Doc!

Just stand on the corner and hear him relate
How they flocked in like sheep when they opened the gate!
How men fought like demons to buy the reserves!
And the walls of the women quite got on his nerves!
How children wept shrilly, when doorkespers stern
Were forced to debar them from seeing his turn!
How thousands on thousands just clamored to pay
For seats for next year, when they turned 'em away!

The Doc says Dan Webster could talk in his prime,
And Clay was a knockout in that bygone time,
But never since actors have been in the biz
Was an act that could stack for an instant with his.
To prove it he'll show you that Dan'l and Hank
Ne'er piled up the roll that he's got in the bank.
Caruso and Lauder would both go in hock
If they had to play the same towns with the Doc!

Let Voddyville guys thank their stars there's a reason
That the Doc cannot, play but a limited season.
There'd not be a show that could stay above ground
If he hit the road for an all-the-year-round.
So stop and reflect, and be real good and glad
That for forty-two weeks he must work up his "ad."
But even at that, all the boys on the block
Have sure got to hand the "You win!" to the Doc!
